Hijacker Shot Dead

HONG KONG (AP) — A crew member waving an axe and a pair of scissors tried to hijack a Taiwanese airliner to China today but a security guard aboard the plane shot and killed him, police said.

The pilot and co-pilot were injured by the crew member, identified as the flight engineer, before he was shot, police said.

The plane, a Boeing 737 carrying 101 persons from Taiwan to Hong Kong, landed at Hong Kong and the "situation is under control," a government spokesman said.

Both injured crew members were in hospital in satisfactory condition.

Officials said radar at Hong Kong airport tracking the incoming flight spotted the plane veering slightly off its regular course toward the China mainland when it was about 16 kilometres from Hong Kong.

The plane was carrying 92 passengers and a crew of nine. It was parked at one end of the airport and reporters were barred from entering the area.

One of the passengers, a U.S. citizen living in Hong Kong, George Whittaker, said there was no panic during the attempted hijack.

Whittaker said when the flight was about 10 minutes from Hong Kong, "I heard a number of men kicking about in the cockpit."

He said he then heard a Chinese voice over the loudspeaker.

"Immediately afterwards, I saw one cabinet attendant and another man in civilian clothes storm open the door. Later I saw a man lying on the floor of the cockpit."

A government spokesman said a Taiwanese police delegation will come to Hong Kong to investigate the incident.

Federal Workers Up in Arms Over New Rules

By RON CLINGEN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The government intends to clamp a firm new grip on public service employees as soon as it can push amendments through the Commons.

Proposed amendments to the Public Service Staff Relations ACT (PSSRA) would give the government power to lock out employees, invoke layoffs of up to 60 days, and exclude close to 5,000 more staff members from union bargaining units.

Even before the recommended amendments were tabled in the Commons, Public Service Alliance of Canada president Andy Stewart was branding the legislation as "regressive."

He said it was "unbelievable" that the government would introduce the proposals "at a time when strong positive steps are needed to improve the employer-employee relationship in the public service."

Treasury Board President Robert Andras said Wednesday he anticipated some tough opposition but expected the legislation could be moved through the Commons "over the next two or three weeks."

The amendments would include new teeth in the staff relations act for the policy of salary comparability with the private sector, based on total compensation.

Total compensation takes into account the aggregate monetary value of pay and fringe benefits in relation to the number of hours worked.

The amendments would continue to base compensation on comparisons with similar jobs in the private sector, where possible. Otherwise, comparisons would be with other public service or quasi-public service organizations.

However, the formula, in the view of the PSAC president, "is as impractical as the anti-inflation program guidelines which have not only reduced wage increases but have left prices, and hence inflation, virtually unchecked."

Stewart said the proposal is "nothing more than an illegitimate child of the anti-inflation program."

Andras insisted the move is not an attempt to continue wage and price controls for public servants after the Anti-Inflation Board is disbanded later this year.

Although it was not spelled out in the proposed legislation, Stewart said Treasury Board has made it clear to union officials that the government wants "average" compensation in the private sector to become "maximum" compensation in the public sector.

"It is often impossible to determine the total income of employees in the private sector because of many hidden benefits such as housing allowances, bonuses, company cars, stock options and discount purchase plans," Stewart contended.

And, the union spokesman stressed, "the determination of compensation based on any predetermined formula would make a farce out of any system of collective bargaining."

The amendments also include a clause which would

MINI-SUB TRAPPED ON SEA BED

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (AP) — A two-man submarine engaged in North Sea oil operations was snagged by a wire and trapped on the seabed nearly 90 metres (300 feet) down today, operators said.

The P. and O. Steam Navigation Co., which is operating the vessel for the American Conoco oil concern, said: "The two men aboard have enough oxygen and food to last eight days. They are sitting calmly on the bottom waiting to be rescued."

Loan Rate Bolsters $

Times News Services

The Canadian government has moved on two fronts to strengthen the dollar and is holding talks today with senior U.S. government finance officials on common economic problems.

The Bank of Canada lending rate was raised from 7.5 to 8 per cent Wednesday and the government formally moved to sell Canadian bonds in the U.S. market.

This action came after the dollar had fallen on New York markets to a post-1933 low of 88.68 cents U.S.

The Canadian dollar staged a modest recovery in active morning trading on New York money markets today. But foreign exchange dealers warned the recovery may only be a temporary one.

In Montreal at noon today the U.S. dollar was worth $1.1244 Canadian, down 33-100 from Wednesday.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 13-50 at $0.8894 U.S.

The U.S. dollar fell to a new low of 233.575 yen in Tokyo today but was stronger or steady against major European currencies. Gold slid down from its three-year high of about $190 an ounce Wednesday.

Woman Injured By Shot

A young woman shot accidentally by police attempting to arrest a burglary suspect Wednesday night in Port Alberni is in stable condition in Victoria General Hospital today.

Rose Minnie Peters, 18, of Port Alberni, underwent surgery for what the hospital described as a serious neck wound and is in the intensive care unit.

Police arrested Ian David Seitcher, 24, of Port Alberni, after a rifle was shot from his hand.

Peters was wounded when pellets ricocheted off the rifle. Seitcher was not injured.

No charges have been laid, police said.

RCMP said Peters was about 175 feet away from a sporting goods store when a man carrying a rifle and pistol emerged.

A member of a police emergency response team ordered the man to drop the weapons and when the suspect refused, the officer fired his shotgun from a distance of about 10 feet. Police said the charge hit the rifle stock.

Shotgun pellets apparently ricocheted and struck Peters in the neck.

The shooting ended a dramatic 80 minutes in which police covered the front and rear doors of the store after responding to a report that a burglary was in progress.

They attempted to talk the intruder into giving himself up.

"He was observed inside roaming around with handguns and rifles," a policeman said.

Members of the man's family and Peters, known to be a friend of the man, were called to try and persuade him to come out.

But when the man finally rushed out about 10 p.m. he was still armed.

Warrant Out for Me Cossitt Now Says

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt said Wednesday he has learned from sources that the federal government has prepared a warrant for his arrest.

Cossitt said the RCMP has the warrant and is waiting for government instructions on whether it will be served.

The MP for the Ontario riding of Leeds said the government will have to make a political decision before the RCMP takes any action.

Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais has threatened to arrest Cossitt to recover top-secret RCMP documents on Soviet espionage activities in Canada that Cossitt is alleged to possess.

Cossitt said the RCMP may have been looking for him Wednesday night but he said he left his Commons office to tape a television interview and was not hiding.

The MP said he was surprised by the RCMP raid Wednesday on the Ottawa television studios of CTV and Global Television Networks.

Film from a Parliament Hill news conference Feb. 21 held by Cossitt was seized and Cossitt said he could not believe the government would go so far as to raid the media.

Cossitt said he will be at home in Brockville today working on a speech he is to deliver to the Brockville Chamber of Commerce annual meeting tonight.

Cossitt decided to stay in Ottawa on Wednesday rather than return home to Brockville after he learned the cabinet had been called into special session.

"This is political all the way now — the prime minister is directing the hunt himself — he's lost his senses in pushing the Mounties on," he said.

FREE GIFTS FOR TENANTS

Free gifts for renters will come to Victoria in a big way before summer, Greater Victoria Apartment Owners Association secretary-manager Clayton Warren said today.

"We expect the vacancy rate will soar in April and early May when the university kids start moving out," he said.

"That's when landlords will begin offering gifts and other incentives. There has been a lot of talk about this already."

Watches, free rent and even groceries have been offered by landlords elsewhere in B.C. in an effort to fill vacancies.

In Victoria, some landlords are already offering help with moving expenses and in odd cases, a month's free rent.

Warren said Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will conduct a Victoria vacancy rate survey in April and he expects it will show at least six per cent of local apartments are empty.

"This problem is growing and it will become quite severe when the university students begin moving out at the end of the term."

Warren said Victoria landlords will be studying the promotional efforts elsewhere in B.C.

Some landlords are offering bonuses to tenants who persuade a friend to move into the building. The bonus can include cash, extra furnishings or a rent reduction.

Convicts Let Two Go Free

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — The four armed convicts holding seven guards hostage at a provincial prison here have allowed two prisoners not directly involved in the incident to leave the prison.

Quebec provincial police spokesman Ronald Brunet said today the hostage-takers asked for nothing in exchange for the release of the two men, identified as Philippe Patrice, 40, and Daniel Plante, 19.

The two were among 15 prisoners being held at La Prison Commun de St. Jerome when the incident began Wednesday afternoon.

Like the two released, the 13 remaining prisoners are housed in cells located in the same area of the prison where the four hostage-takers have barricaded themselves. But they have neither joined the hostage takers nor been threatened by them.

The two men were released after a brief telephone conversation between Edgar Roussel, 32, one of the hostage-takers, and Montreal lawyer Frank Shoofey, who represents Patrice.

Shoofey said Roussel had agreed to release Patrice — a first offender — for humanitarian reasons. He described his client as "mentally ill and physically unwell."

Mexican Police Accused Of Covering Up Murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mexican police were accused Wednesday of trying to cover up the murder of a Vancouver man who was stabbed to death in Acapulco — the fourth violent death of a Canadian in Mexico in the past two months.

Alan Judge, 51, was stabbed many times in the abdomen, the Canadian embassy in Mexico City said Wednesday.

Judge, a construction worker who ran as a CCF candidate in Vancouver Centre 20 years ago, died Jan. 16.

Details of the killing emerged Wednesday as investigations continued into the suspected murder last month of a young Mountie, Constable Lonnie Neely, and a Vancouver couple who were found shot and burned in a pig farm near Guadalajara in January.

Acapulco police, who are still investigating Judge's murder, described it as a "crime of passion."

But John Keating, a close friend of Judge who was with him in Acapulco, said: "Rubbish. It was straight robbery. Alan was killed by two young Mexican boys he had befriended. They robbed him of $500 when they were high on beer and grass."

Keating, now back in Vancouver, went on: "It happened at the height of the tourist season and it was kept quiet because it would have scared the wits out of the tourists.

"The present government is trying hard to win tourists, and this kind of thing wouldn't have helped."

Keating said that on the morning of the murder, Judge had withdrawn about $300 from his bank. "He also had about $200 in traveller's cheques. He would have carried it all in a money belt around his waist — and that's a lot of money in Mexico.

"He went to the beach and returned to his apartment at 3:45 p.m. Two hours later he was dead. I was told he had been stabbed 15 times — there was blood all over the place. But Alan must have put up a real fight.

"These two young Mexican street boys had been living with him. He was so generous; he would befriend anyone in need. But that morning he had told one of them to get out.

"They cleaned the place out — his money, passport, documents, papers, tape recorder and typewriter were all stolen."

Judge, who lived in Vancouver, arrived in Mexico last Oct. 4. Keating joined him two weeks later. They went there to get hair transplants. "A three-month course of surgical transplants cost us about $1,500 in Mexico City, about half the cost of a similar treatment in Vancouver," said Keating.

A spokesman for the Canadian embassy confirmed that Mexican police are still investigating the murder, and are searching for a male suspect they have not named. "The police say it was a crime of passion. We were called in and made arrangements for a simple burial in Acapulco after contacting his relatives in Canada."

Hydro Unions Talking

Representatives of B.C. Hydro and three unions met with Labor Minister Allan Williams today in an effort to resolve contract disputes which could develop into a crippling strikes.

The meeting began at 1 p.m. amid reports that talks could last longer than the one day if the minister feels a possibility for settlement exists.

The three unions involved, representing about 7,500 employees, are the Amalgamated Transit Union, the Office and Technical Employees Union and a local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, representing gas workers.

All three unions are in a position to strike.

Are We Their Past?

HAMILTON (CP) — An official of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) says unidentified flying objects may be humans from the future visiting their history.

Charles Kubokawa said Wednesday he has seen pictures and it is foolish to discount them.

"We know we have stone age people in the Philippines," he said. "Why can't we have other beings of another highly-developed stage here too?

"Two-thirds of the world has not been explored fully."

A number of UFOs were reported in southern Ontario on Monday night.

Kubokawa, in Hamilton to speak at McMaster University, said many people criticize the NASA space program as unproductive. They would rather have social welfare spending, he said.

"But everyone benefits from the spin-offs," he said. "Digital watches, vest-pocket computers, microwave ovens, a lot of bio-medical things were developed by the space program," he said.

Research and development programs are important to the economic future of all developing countries, including Canada, and they must spend money on it, he said.

Kubokawa is chief of NASA's Ames research centre technology utilization office at Moffett Field, Calif.

Zambia Says Border 'Tense'

Times News Services

LUSAKA — Zambian Foreign Minister Siteke Mwale said Wednesday exchanges of fire are continuing across the Zambesi River border with Rhodesia following a major incursion, and he described the situation as tense.

Mwale's comments are the first official indication of continued hostilities following one of Rhodesia's biggest-ever raids into Zambia two days ago.

Rhodesia said Tuesday its white-led troops had withdrawn. But Mwale told a news conference that while the Rhodesians have been repelled, "the situation is not stagnant. It is tense. There are exchanges of fire across the border. Fighting is still going on."

Mwale was speaking before leaving for New York where Zambia is to complain to the United Nations Security Council about the raid, in which the Rhodesians claim to have killed at least 38 black nationalist guerrillas.

He warned of possible superpower involvement in the six-year old Rhodesia war, and said Western powers should take steps to end the fighting now before it became internationalized.

Zambia provides bases for guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU) which has two big bases in or near Luangwa district, nationalist sources say.

In Washington meanwhile, U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen agreed Wednesday that Rhodesia's plan for black majority rule must be greatly improved to avert black-black civil war across southern Africa.

The ultimate danger of greater Soviet-Cuban military involvement in Africa is dangling over the American-British-African discussions, in Washington and at the United Nations.

American and British strategy is to straddle the present dispute, in an attempt to encourage a compromise between the African nationalists inside Rhodesia who last week signed a peace plan with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, and the Africans outside Rhodesia who denounce the plan as "a sellout" to the whites.

Asked if the Salisbury plan is constructive enough to warrant removing the economic sanctions which the United Nations voted against Rhodesia after Smith's government unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965, Vance replied, "No."

If there is no road left open to the Patriotic Front but escalating the guerrilla war against Rhodesia, U.S. planners say, the front is bound to turn — as it has warned — to the Soviet Union and Cuba for reinforcing troops and supplies.

With up to 20,000 Cuban troops now in Angola, and 11,000 in Ethiopia along with Soviet advisers and military supplies, there will be a strong Soviet-Cuban inclination to make a new commitment in southern Africa.

Snow Slide Hits Skier

WHISTLER (CP) — Rick Mandahl, 25, of Garibaldi Lifts Ltd.'s ski patrol, was uninjured Wednesday after being buried for seven minutes under 1.2 metres of snow in a soft slab avalanche on Whistler Mountain, about 100 kilometres north of Vancouver.

Al Turner, manager of the company's ski operation, said Mandahl could credit good training and advanced equipment for his lucky escape.

Turner said Mandahl was unconscious when the other five patrol members dug him out of the snow around noon Wednesday. He revived soon after and was checked by a company doctor. No hospital treatment was required.

Turner said the patrol members, all of whom wore avalanche detectors, dug Mandahl out after their detectors picked up the signal from the buried transmitter worn by the victim.

The patrollers were engaged in normal avalanche work on the Surprise run at about the 1,800-metre level of Whistler Mountain. About 14 centimetres of new snow had fallen overnight.

Minister Ducks Nurses' Protest

Health Minister Bob McClelland said today he will not get involved in the dismissal of a Gorge Road Hospital nursing director Dorothy Youlden.

A letter protesting her firing signed by 58 nurses at the hospital has been sent to McClelland, but the minister said staffing matters are out of his jurisdiction.

Hirings and dismissals are the responsibility of the administration of each individual hospital, not the minister of health's.

For him to get involved, "it would have to be a pretty unusual case," he said.

McLelland Pushed Socred To Resign, Members Agree

LANGLEY (CP) — Two executive members of the Social Credit constituency association of Langley came forward Wednesday to support their ex-president, Al Gates, who claims he was pressured by Health Minister Bob McClelland into resigning last week.

George Dyck, leader of the associations's Aldergrove group, said McClelland proposed the resignation because Gates' name had appeared in local newspapers in connection with a police roundup of an alleged heroin smuggling ring.

McClelland, who represents Langley riding, denied earlier this week he had demanded — or even suggested — that Gates quit his post over the drug incident.

Questioned today about the Socred officials' claim he had acted to get Gates out, McClelland snapped: "I have no further comment to make on the matter.

"The story is over as far as I am concerned. Mr. Gates submitted his resignation and we accepted it."

Dyck said he now is convinced that Gates should not have resigned since he was named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the heroin case only because one suspect had used the telephone at Gates' TV and stereo shop in Abbotsford.

He said he attended the meeting last week at which Gates finally resigned, under protest, but that he wasn't too sure just how the request for the resignation was expressed.

"McClelland made the speech, though," Dyck said, "and it was he who said Gates should resign for the good of the party. I don't believe that now, because I believe Gates did nothing wrong. How could he know what a customer's telephone calls might be about?

"I'm not out to condemn anyone. I just hope that when all the facts are known, the whole thing can be ironed out. Al's a fine fellow and he shouldn't feel he's being forced out of the party."

Another association member, asking that her name be withheld, said Gates' account of what happened to him is correct.

"McClelland asked him to quit, and Al said he wouldn't quit unless the members at the meeting made a motion to dismiss him and voted him out," she said. "The minister talked the members out of allowing the motion."

Watch Out Liars, Horrible Hagoth May be Listening

By H. R. KLEINFIELD

NEW YORK (NYT) - Watch out about lying over the phone if you're making a call in the U.S. There may be a Hagoth on the other end.

A Hagoth is a voice-stress analyzer. It purportedly measures changes in inaudible microtremors of the voice in order to detect when someone is lying. But unlike counterparts in this new and increasingly controversial field, the Hagoth can work directly over a phone. Other voice analyzers require tape recordings.

This means that a Hagoth user can subject someone to a lie-detector test without the person knowing what is going on.

The Hagoth Corporation is based in Issaquah, Wash. Richard Bennett, the president and founder of the company, says he is selling almost all his devices to business men (virtually all of them, he insists, the heads of corporations with sales exceeding $10 million). A smattering are bought by lawyers, psychologists and movie stars who like to fool around with them. Bennett says it is his understanding that the Hagoth is usually used covertly.

The thing looks a bit like a portable tape recorder. It sells for $1,500 and has eight green lights and eight red lights. Green means no stress. Red means stress.

Business executives, Bennett says, employ the Hagoth to detect how reliable suppliers are likely to be, whether another company discussing a merger is really interested or just shopping around, whether a suit can be settled out of court, how honest fellow executives are. "The mind swims with possible applications," he says.

Does Bennett see the device as impinging on someone's privacy? "Heavens, no," he says. "No possible way. This is no more an invasion of privacy than watching for eye movements or analyzing handwriting. Everyone has the right to see if someone is smoking him or not."

Ethics aside, some uses of the device might be illegal. A muddle of confusing laws prohibit or restrict polygraph and voice-analyzer testing in various states and communities. For instance, Pennsylvania outlaws forcing a polygraph test on anyone.

Bennett says he is hoping to sell upward of 8,000 Hagoths this year. That could bring in $12 million for his company, which makes no other products at the moment. He declines to disclose how many sales have been chalked up so far, or whether he has made any money. The Hagoth company came into being in April, 1976, with six prototypes and $54 in the bank.

Not everyone thinks the Hagoth works. Dektor Counterintelligence and Security of Springfield, Va., which makes an analyzer called the Psychological Stress Evaluator (1,300 sold since 1971, at $4,000 apiece), says it tested the Hagoth and found it wanting. It says it played the identical tape several times through the device and got totally different readings each time.

Comments from actual Hagoth users are hard to come by. As general policy, Bennett does not divulge customer names. He says many customers have threatened to sue him if he uncloaked their identities. Nevertheless, he did furnish a couple of names of users willing to talk.

Bill Singer is executive producer with Mai Tai Film Productions of Hollywood. He has used his Hagoth for four months.

"I use it to protect myself," he says. "I get calls all the time from people who want to have a meeting or come to see me. Often, they're trying to do a project that they don't want us to do but are after free advice. That's Hollywood, you know. So When I see a lot of stress, I just say no."

He adds, "My opinion of the Hagoth is it's an executive toy that can help a person make decisions. It allows you to weed out obvious liars."

Biron Valier runs a sports-management agency in St. Louis, called the Valier Creative Management Group. Right now, he represents two racquetball players and tennis pro. He has been a Hagoth man for 1½ years.

"I use it to negotiate contracts," he says. "There have been instances where I would have settled for less money but the machine suggested I should press further and I wound up with a better deal. It's not a cure-all. You have to know how to interpret it. It's another club in the old golf bag."

Carter Begins Action To Get Miners in Pits

She's Allergic To Money. . .

Ever since she started working as a bank teller, Theresa Torza of Old Lyme, Connecticut, has been plagued with a rash on her hands. Dermatologists feel Theresa is most likely allergic to money. To ease the problem, she has taken to wearing a glove while handling currency.

United Press International

The first legal move in ordering striking U.S. coal miners back to the pits under the Taft-Hartley Act was delivered to President Jimmy Carter today.

The formal report to the president by special board of inquiry said chances for a negotiated settlement in the bitter strike were almost nil.

It was a legal first step before the president can ask the attorney-general to seek a federal court injunction to order the miners back to work.

In a preliminary hearing Wednesday, the three-member board agreed that a bargaining impasse exists and an early negotiated settlement was unlikely.

Miners braced for trouble and coal-dependent industries and utilities prepared to wind down. Dwindling fuel supplies pose further layoffs and power shortages for the nation, already staggering under the 94-day-old strike.

"Unless we get a good contract, the lights may go out and it may get cold in homes — then people will know what it's like in a coal mine," said Pennsylvania miner Jim Nuccetelli.

United Mine Workers leaders pressed for federal seizure of the mines — the only move, they said, that would send their 160,000 striking members back to the pits.

In West Virginia, Supreme Court Justice Darrell McGraw called the try for an injunction a mistake.

"They've been issuing injunctions down here for years, but coal miners just don't go back to work under injunctions," he said.

McGraw said the miners won't go back, because they don't want to stock up the coal companies so they can withstand another walkout.

Meanwhile, the U.S. labor department said today 25,500 workers were laid off for all or part of last week due to the effects of the coal strike and power shortages.

The department said that was an increase of 2,900 in the number of layoffs over the previous week.

Those layoffs, however, are a trickle of the number which the administration forecasts if shipments of coal are not increased considerably.

Carter said this week that layoffs could reach one million if the coal strike continues for another month. White House economist Charles Schultze later put the figure at three million.

Rail Sabotage In Florida

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Bolts were removed from railroad track connections in locations near Largo and Bradenton in a possible sabotage attempt, an official of Seaboard Coast Line Railroad said today.

Capt. Hayward Summerlin, chief of railroad police for the Tampa District, said bolts were found missing Monday at a site north of Bradenton and near Largo today.

JOB PICTURE BRIGHTER

VANCOUVER (CP) — The dean of the University of B.C.'s education faculty says the job picture isn't that bad for the 1,257 people who will receive elementary and secondary school teaching certificates this spring.

John Andrews commented after several education students, concerned about the possibilities and eager to sign up for job interviews, had stood in the rain from midnight Monday to 7 a.m. Tuesday when the UBC student services placement centre opened its doors.

The job interviews by school district superintendents from such areas as Nishga, Shuswap, northern Vancouver Island, the Queen Charlottes and Kitimat begin next Monday.

Andrews said a recent university survey shows that 80 per cent of UBC education faculty graduates in 1977 did receive full-time teaching positions in B.C.

Dixy Keeps Option Open On Washington Oil Port

OLYMPIA (AP) — Washington State Governor Dixy Lee Ray said Wednesday she agrees with her energy and ecology directors that no need exists at this time for an oil trans-shipment port in Washington.

But she said she didn't want "to foreclose for all eternity" that an oil trans-shipment port might be needed at some time in the future.

Ray made the comments to reporters after a meeting with several officials of the Atlantic Richfield Co. to discuss last Monday's United States Supreme Court decision invalidating a Washington law limiting the size of tankers entering Puget Sound to 125,000 deadweight tons.

ARCO senior vice president Lodwrick Cook said he assured Ray his company has no plans to bring larger tanker into the sound at present.

ARCO currently supplies its Cherry Point refinery with Alaskan crude oil transported in 120,000 deadweight ton tankers.

Cook said the company has two 189,000-ton vessels under construction and that they might call at Puget Sound "once in a while."

"It is more economical to use the smaller tankers on this run," he said. Larger tankers, he said, will be used to transport Alaskan crude to ARCO's southern California refinery.

Cook also said ARCO will continue to put Washington licensed pilots on its ships entering the sound, which they are not required to do under the Supreme Court decision.

He also said if ships larger than 125,000 deadweight tons enter the sound, they will be escorted by tugs despite a loophole in the law that might make it unnecessary. Under the law — after the Supreme Court deleted the size limitation — only ships ranging from 40,000 to 125,000 tons are required to use tug escorts.

Although Ray agreed with Energy Director Larry Bradley and Ecology Director Wilbur Hallaeur that there was no need at this time for an oil port in Washington, she said that if in the future it should become necessary to trans-ship oil through the state she would support that move.

Postal Talks Slated

OTTAWA (CP) — Conciliation in the prickly dispute between the post office and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers will begin within a week, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said Wednesday.

Government officials "are doing everything we can" to settle the contract dispute, Lamontagne said in the Commons in response to a question from John Rodriguez (NDP—Nickel Belt).

"The union first made its proposals to the department 10 months ago and to this day the post office department has not responded to these proposals," Rodriguez said.

Lamontagne dismissed a request in the Commons Tuesday that an all-party committee be established to investigate labor problems in the post office.

"I have invited repeatedly CUPW to come and talk with us and I have even invited the president, Mr. Parrot, to discuss his pet baby to have a Crown corporation established," Lamontagne said Wednesday.

"I said come with us and we will discuss it together, but up to now we have only refusals."

Where the Money Went

Appropriate thoughts for income tax time: think Ottawa is throwing away your tax dollars as if they were play money?

The federal budget is still growing at a faster rate than most other economic indicators, but believe it or not, restraint is actually taking hold in some parts of the bureaucracy.

Credit where it's due — the treasury board, Ottawa's paymaster, reports some results in trying to save you money. With appropriate fanfare, these savings were reported last month but they haven't received all that much attention.

The biggest single saving is a $30 million reduction in the government's energy costs. Conservation has cut consumption by about nine per cent this year, compared with the previous fiscal year, 1975-76.

Elsewhere, there is a total ban on first class air travel except in "the most extenuating circumstances" — diplomatic couriers, medical reasons, emergencies when economy class is filled. Quarter by quarter, the number of first class flights by civil servants has declined from 681 in Oct.-Dec., 1975 to 99 in July-Sept., 1977.

Expenses for taxis have dropped considerably in the two years that treasury board required that all departments log every taxi trip. One department's taxi bills dropped to $27,000 in 1976-77 from $80,000 the year before.

Also, for one year the government stopped buying replacement vehicles and when the suspension was ended, compact cars were bought instead of full-size sedans. Over-all, the latter cost 43 per cent less to run than the big sedans. Excluding RCMP vehicles, the government spent $8.1 million for 1,752 vehicles in the 1975 model year, $7.5 million for 1,463 in 1976 and $8.4 million for 1,499 in 1977 effectively freezing expenditures in this area.

Big savings were achieved in the government's main activity, paper-pushing. Since January, 1976 the rate of increase in purchase of photocopying machines has been held to 6.2 per cent.

We are of two minds about the savings boasted of by the treasury board. On one side, hurray for any saving in tax dollars. It's about time. On the other hand, if there can be such dramatic cuts — an 85 per cent reduction in first class air travel, pre-1976 photocopier purchases were rocketing upwards at 69 per cent a year — without any noticeable reduction in quality or quantity of services furnished by the feds, then heavens, what enormous pots of money went down the drain before "restraint" began?

Not-So-Friendly Cove

So the Indians of Friendly Cove and related areas have turned thumbs down on the whole idea of the Captain Cook Bicentennial celebrations, have rejected $200,000 from the provincial government to build a new longhouse, have banned all non-Indians from Friendly Cove, and are planning to write their own history of the area.

It was, unfortunately, all that could be expected. Despite the months of so-called negotiations that went on between the Mowachaht Indian band and the provincial government, the two sides were never even close to being on the same wavelength.

If the official negotiations were about longhouses, fishing boats and dollars, the underlying issues were about Indian attitudes towards themselves, their history and their future, and about the attitudes of white officialdom towards the Indians.

Quite simply, the Indians see no reason whatsoever why they should celebrate the coming of Captain Cook — or any other white man. From their viewpoint, it was only after the white man settled the west coast that life went bad for them. They see no real way in which the white man can make up to them for what he has done in the past 200 years.

They set conditions under which they would participate in the Cook Bicentennial, but at the same time they undoubtedly knew that the government was, to say the least, unlikely to accept such costly demands.

From the government's viewpoint, the demands were outrageous — everything from a television aerial to a fishing fleet for a community that now is inhabited by only five people. In its view, its offer was to help the Indians participate in an exciting tourist promotion festival, not to try to redress the wrongs of a couple of hundred years.

Regretfully, this small event is undoubtedly symbolic of the government's relations with the province's Indians for the next few years, as the two groups try to work through much larger issues, such as land claims. The Indians will be seeking to try to change the course of history for their people; the government will offer what it sees as reasonable, remedial solutions to some of the Indians' problems.

Not only are the two sides not playing the game by the same rules, they're not even in the same ballpark.

Singing' in the Rain

The poet of the main B.C. weather office, Victoria's own John Thomas, sharpened his lyrical metaphors again this week. Herewith Tuesday's forecast, which may make the moody moisture more amenable:

"After a silence of 10 days or so old Mother Nature's philharmonic is once again playing that old familiar west coast symphony to the tune of a strong southwesterly flow of moist mild pacific air.

"Starting with the pitter pat of a few raindrops yesterday the storm grew overnight to a crescendo of pounding rain and gales. Along the exposed shoreline rain gauges could barely keep up and by this morning places such as Tofino had recieved up to 100 millimeters.

"As the frontal system conducting this performance spreads inland today it will give rain and wet snow to most areas with rain along the coast slowing gradually down to showers. The pattern now established is a stable one with a trough over the Pacific so we can expect repeat performances all week from a series of frontal disturbances."

Just singin' in the rain . . .

. . . I'm afraid my opinion concurs with the public's, Mr. Cullen . . . there's absolutely no sign of a backbone . . ."

Hearing the Good Things

LOS ANGELES — A couple of weeks ago, about 800 people gathered here in a Congress of the Laity to discuss the religious and social issues of the day. The idea behind the congress was that religion is too serious to be left to the clergy alone, and that social questions are too important to be left to political leaders. The congress felt the people themselves must get more deeply involved in the spiritual and material conflicts of the U.S.

Howard E. Butt, Jr., of Corpus Christi, Texas, stated its purpose:

"The contemporary world," he said, "cries out for creative, competent, moral leadership. In response, we are calling together men and women of prominence and influence from government and business, from science and the arts, from the professions, from sports and entertainment and from family life who are open to the leadership of Jesus Christ.

Break Barriers

"Together, we will break through the traditional barriers between liberals and conservatives, strengthening the best in both, calling each of us to creative change. We will examine the tension between secular leadership and Christian discipleship, explore the interactions between Christianity and our culture, discover the intellectual, psychological and artistic implications of faith, and build bridges of mutual support."

Well, this is rather a tall order, and while there was some useful plain talk about the clash between the sacred and the profane in American life, it would be too much to say that the congress made any great breakthroughs or built many bridges beyond the consciousness of the participants.

Three themes seemed to recur in the discussions here: first, that the regrets, perplexities and anxieties of our time couldn't be blamed on the "failure" of our religious and secular leaders, but must also be a charge on the people themselves. Second, that the majority of the American people may not believe but feel amputated without belief and at least believe in believing; and third, that there was a growing "remnant" of the people who were willing to take some responsibility for reviving a national debate on the moral foundations of the republic.

One of the interesting things about this congress is that it didn't get lost in argument between sects, or over the contemporary disputes about abortion, or women in the clergy. It crossed denominational and theological lines, and reached out to the Bible classes among businessmen and the prayer breakfasts among politicians, and the growing religious organizations of sports figures like Roger Staubach and coach Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys.

This "democratization" of the church has its secular counterpart in the universities — again not a major movement, but an important symbol of change on the campuses. Edward B. Fiske of The New York Times reports that "courses in ethics, once confined largely to departments of theology and philosophy, have moved into the mainstream of American universities and professional schools."

At least half of the nation's 116 medical schools, he reports, or about triple the number of five years ago, now have humanities departments or regular programs in medical ethics and a similar trend is evident in law, engineering, public policy and professional schools."

Vietnam and Watergate obviously had a lot to do with this. How could so many officials and lawyers have connived at the war plans of Nixon and the obstruction of justice in the Watergate conspiracy if they understood the philosophy of the country and/or the prohibitions of the constitution?

University Debates

All this is now being debated in the professional schools of the universities more intensely than it was before Nixon's moral crash. Maybe it won't do much good. Haldeman is still proving that it pays to be loyal to nobody; not even to the truth, not even to yourself; but everybody's on to him. His commercial success is even more repulsive than his political failure, and he is now a case study in the universities on how power can ruin a good life.

How can you get a hearing for the good things, the yearnings in the American character, when they are overwhelmed by sleazy twisters like Haldeman?

The Congress of the Laity here had no answers to these questions, but at least they tried, and they did one thing in the process. They reminded us that, outside of Washington, outside of all the arguments over the Middle East, and the miners' struggles in the U.S. midwest, there are a lot of people in this country, literally millions of them in critical political areas, who are thinking about the meaning and principles of this country, and want to be heard.

Moving Miracle

Now why wasn't I invited? Former mayors were there with their families and cameras. The owner's wife had on her cashmere coat. Local and not-so-local residents lined the street and boulevards. People hung from the balconies and roofs of neighboring apartments. Hotel guests took some sun from the veranda of the Georgian Suite and breakfast guests were entertained by the waterfront activity. And why the gala turnout? Well, Monday morning was moving day for Miracle, Victoria's adopted killer whale.

At 10:30 a.m., Miracle was moved by helicopter from her temporary pool at the Oak Bay Beach hotel to her new quarters in Sealand at the Oak Bay marina. A troupe of wet-suited assistants under the direction of a Sealand-jacketed man with a clipboard, guided Miracle into a sling for the quarter-mile flight to her new home. During the loading operation a desk clerk from the hotel dropped his camera lens in the salt water. Paul Horn waited with poised flute case, press with and without press passes perched on the pool's edge, recorders, cameras and notebooks at the ready, spectators speculated on the whale's discomfort and confusion and two young girls tried to get on televison.

Carnival-like indeed was the sight of a tail-flapping whale slung at the end of a cable being helicoptered over the ocean with a land escort including a siren-escorted pickup truck full of divers, dashing spectators and more blue Sealand jackets and Oak Bay police uniforms than have ever been assembled in one place on a February Monday morning. The whale was settled into its new pool to a chorus of Glenlyon primary school footsteps beating a path to the edge of the marina seawall to watch, and a sigh of defeat from the police set to keep the crowd back.

So Sealand has another whale and the Oak Bay Beach hotel has its swimming pool back. Miracle is in good health and we, the morning bike-riders and wool-jacketed breakfasters, haven't had such a time since the Social Credit nominating meeting or the tea party parade. I suppose we were all invited and a good time was had by all. — Michael Costello, 2157 Cubbon Drive.

Keep the smoky, road-hogging steel monsters out of park, urges reader.

Cars in Parks

I must speak out in favor of the sentiments of Mr. William Firth, and undoubtedly of many other more permanent residents of this city, on the subject of the Beacon Hill "motorists' playground."

In a city devoted to the four-wheeled overlord, in which I can find no pleasant area at all for the pedestrian to enjoy the potential beauty of your perpetual spring (for all are riddled by the sound and smells of internal combustion), I would suggest that the banning of motor traffic at least from the playground is essential. This would give at least one haven of pleasant sight, smell and sound in the city; as well as ducks, the human underlings may well benefit.

As for those aldermen, used car salesmen and members of the generation who hitherto failed to qualify for their walking papers; given parking at the very edge of the park, they might find willing volunteers to push their wheelchairs in a new and surprisingly more delightful environment. Once people climb out of and away from their master-machines, they might even notice one another! You never know.

Meanwhile, I'd rather be off to more beautiful, less aurally-polluted climes, where you can even smell the flowers in the parks. — W. G. Blann, 2820 Scott Street.

Don't Blame Mother

Re: It All Goes Right Back to Mother published in the Victoria Times, Feb. 24. Author Nancy Friday's theory on the mother-daughter relationship, "after four years of interviewing more than 300 women across the country, plus experts in psychiatry and sociology on the subject" took me on a journey into the past.

Forty-three years ago, my parents purchased a large tent, gathered all the necessary gear, and took us kids off to a lovely place where we swam, rose at dawn to enjoy the wonders of the rising sun, sky, bird-song, serenity and beauty. Few others were encamped but some distance away was a tent in which a family, parents and four sons, were happily sharing the delights to be found there. Communication was limited as both families preferred to remain aloof, enjoying their sense of freedom.

The boys' mother obviously observed my sisters and me and one afternoon invited us to visit her. How well I recall her comment: "I have four sons and no daughters and have never regretted it. I've never had to worry about girls getting into my things." My sisters and I never got "into" Mother's "things" but on occasion, when she opened her cedar chest we looked with pleasure at the pretty white silk parasol, the Paisley shawls brought from Scotland by her grandparents, Grandma Charlotte's bonnet, etc.

After the war I read that one son had become a person of high rank and distinguished career. That son, and another — perhaps all four, attended the same high school as myself and it was obvious even then that the boy was going to amount to something. It takes no imagination on my part to know that all achieved that which is called success.

No sociologist or psychiatrist I, and I have no wish to listen to the crybaby tales of women whose mothers did them wrong, but had those boys not turned out so well, there can be no doubt their mother would have been blamed and held to account. Mothers make such good and convenient scapegoats. Fathers? My goodness, no. Daughters? Good heavens, don't they spend most of their waking hours as children in the presence of their mothers?

How about kids who come from large families — or used to, and rarely had a moment with their mothers because she was busy with cleaning and sewing and cooking and baking and mending and so many other duties of homemaking. Rarely did she have a moment for herself, let alone her children.

In my possession is a drawing of myself, by my Father. "Listening to Mother's Story" is written beneath it. Time for a bedtime story was all the time Mother had to be with her children after the long hours of work. I know what she did for me. She could not have done more. — A. Miller, Victoria.

Delinquents

Recently the Times published an article giving the results of a survey on the causes of delinquency. The survey was conducted by a university professor who came to the very predictable conclusion that delinquents come mainly from broken homes of the lower socio-economic level, from families living in public housing.

I do not quarrel with the professor's figures but I do wonder what criteria he has set for the delinquent label. One would suppose that it is a person who breaks laws but is it:

(a) a person who breaks laws without getting caught;

(b) a person of influence and wealth who breaks laws but avoids prosecution because of his influence, or

(c) a person who breaks laws, gets caught, then is prosecuted because he/she comes of a broken home of the lower socio-economic level and, lacking influence, is prosecuted and sentenced; thus becoming a delinquent of the professor's statistics?

I know of a girl, who I will call Jane Doe, who at 17 left a broken home because of unbearable circumstances. She went to live with young relatives and managed to put herself through school — she was well thought of by her teachers. She made one mistake, however, she got caught when she shoplifted a 98 cent bottle of deodorant. Being young, alone, defenceless, and poor, she was duly prosecuted and sentenced to six months on probation. She was thus given a criminal record and could be one of those counted on the professor's statistics.

Another case comes to mind: a solicitor-general of Canada who, in order to avoid embarrassment to himself, forged away the life of his unborn child. He broke two laws: that of forgery and the abortion law which says an abortion can only be performed when there is a grave risk for the mother. He was a person of power and influence and managed not only to avoid prosecution, but also became something of a public hero to social rednecks. He has skillfully avoided a criminal record but who is the delinquent, he or Jane Doe?

If he breaks the law, the rich person is considered high spirited and deserving of sympathy if he is caught. The poor man is considered a criminal and is prosecuted with the full ferocity of law.

I suggest that if the professor's figures on delinquency included all the people who break laws, not those actually prosecuted and put on criminal record; the highest per capita proportion would appear in the ranks of people in the higher socio-economic levels, of families who live in luxury housing publicly supported by tax write-offs. — P. C. Malone, 923 Forshaw Road.

Medicine of Future Treats Person, Not Symptom

By SIDNEY KATZ
Toronto Star

SMITH'S FALLS, Ont. — Dr. Michael Smith generates less than $25,000 in health costs through the Ontario Health Insurance Plan each year — one-tenth the provincial average — yet he believes he gives his patients better care than most doctors.

Smith, 39, has rejected the standard medical procedure of treating a patient's symptoms with expensive pain-killing or mood-altering drugs, in favor of what he calls "holistic therapy" — medical jargon for preventing disease by treating the root causes, often deep in the private lives of his patients.

"The symptoms suffered by 90 per cent of my clients are non-organic and are due to unhappiness caused by their family life or job or some other pressure in society," says the general practitioner in Smith's Falls, a community of 10,000, sixty miles southwest of Ottawa.

Ontario Ministry of Health officials agree that the traditional practice of medicine hasn't been a great success.

"After all the billions and billions of dollars we've poured into the health system in recent years, there's not an iota of proof that we've raised the level of health one bit," one ministry official has said.

The OHIP budget has grown to $3.8 billion — three times what it was eight years ago. Health expenditures now consume one-third of Ontario's entire revenue. Worried government officials are wondering how long we can continue to subsidize a system of medical treatment that multiplies disease rather than cures it.

Many observers feel that Smith, a University of Toronto medical school graduate, is today practising the medicine of the future. He characterizes himself as "a doctor of health, not disease."

"Repeatedly treating the same symptoms is lucrative for the doctor, but doesn't help the patient. It's a waste of time and money. After 10 years of it, my conscience would no longer permit me to practise this kind of dead-end medicine."

So, two years ago, he switched over completely to his new methods.

The patient who consults Smith for the first time is in for a series of surprises.

To begin with, he'll be referred to as a "client."

'A Contract'

"I'm no Superman" says Smith. "My client is my equal. We enter into a contract. He buys my skills and we jointly share reponsibility in dealing with his health problems."

Smith has adopted the traditional Chinese concept of a physician as his model. The doctor's job, according to the Chinese, was to keep his patients healthy. Patients paid their physician an annual stipend which entitled them to two or three visits per year. It was the doctor's responsibility to detect the earliest warning signals of approaching ill health.

Are the patient's various pulse beats functioning normally? Is his breathing relaxed? Are his eyes dead or alive? Is his posture firm and upright or slouched and defeated? Does the color and temperature of his skin throughout his body indicate good health? Does he smell healthy?

The Chinese physician would then prescribe measures to ward off an approaching disease. They might include breathing and other exercises; changes in diet; acupuncture; relaxation.

The doctor was expected to refund the patient his fee if he became ill. If he died from a cause other than old age, the doctor was required to hang a lighted red lantern in front of his house as a sign of disgrace.

Smith follows many of the same principles. His first session with a new client is devoted to routine diagnostic tests to rule out gross diseases — blood, urine, temperature, blood pressure. "Only about 1 in 10 patients have a structural defect sufficiently advanced so you can detect it," says Smith. "As for the other nine, diagnostic tools like X-rays and blood tests are too crude to pinpoint the souce of their trouble."

When a patient complains of fatigue, apathy, insomnia, depression, skin disorders, headaches and backaches, the average physician may be at a loss to know what to do. Usually, he takes the easy way out and prescribes sedating, painkilling or mood-altering drugs. Often, he'll admonish the patient, "There's nothing wrong with you — it's all in your head."

But, this is of scant comfort to the patient. The symptoms persist so he returns to the doctor. After a three-minute consultation he is given another prescription. In time, he becomes used to taking chemicals and the source of his problems continues to be ignored. Many patients become cynical and even bitter about the medical profession.

Drugs, Surgery

Discontented, they'll go shopping from doctor to doctor, ending up with more drugs and, sometimes, even unnecessary surgery.

Smith places some of the blame on our medical schools, which he says, are staffed by technicians who turn out technicians who focus on the patient's physical symptoms, to the exclusion of practically all else.

Smith lists some of the relationships which frequently cause ill health: A child with a cruel and abusive parent; a person working for a tyrannical boss; a woman (or man) married to a selfish, demanding spouse. "These situations can generate pressures which can kill both the body and the spirit.

"Most doctors are unaware of the inner realities of their patients' lives. How often has a patient been told that his problem is not serious because it's not organic and, later, he committed suicide?" Smith asks.

● "An adolescent girl, for example, succumbs to pressure from her boyfriend and has sex with him. She's been led to believe that it's the thing to do, it's expected of her. Yet she's not ready for this kind of intimacy. In effect, she's the victim of biological rape. It's not surprising that later she may suffer with a bladder infection, uterine bleeding or pain in the pelvic region"

● A 5-year-old boy — a patient of Smith's — is viciously beaten by a cruel father. In order to cut off unpleasant feelings and sensations, he holds his breath, sucks in his belly and immobilizes his diaphragm. He will lie very still to avoid feeling afraid. In short, he will "deaden" his body not to feel physical and psychic pain. This avoidance can establish a pattern of reaction which could be the source of serious illness in the future.

● Another patient, when a 5-year-old girl, looked into the kitchen window and saw her mother making love to a neighbor. Her mother was a strict disciplinarian who frequently strapped her. The child reasoned that, by looking into her eyes, her mother would know that she had witnessed the love-making and thrash her. To protect herself, the girl "shortened her vision," she deliberately willed her eyesight to be fuzzy beyond a few feet. At 24, the girl was still wearing thick-lensed glasses.

"Two of the commonest complaints are pain and depression," Smith says. "Yet, 99 per cent of pain is caused by muscle tension and most fatigue stems from emotional depression."

His therapy begins by teaching the patient how to breathe deeply and how to completely relax. He makes liberal use of such techniques as hypnotism, self-hypnotism, acupuncture, psychotherapy and bioenergetics.

All of this requires a lot of time. The first few consultations with a client may last 60 to 90 minutes. Clients drop out of sight after about a half dozen visits, then re-appear after a year or two, for a check-up or with a specific problem.

Negative Effect

"In the long run," explained Smith, "my time is being used economically." Most patients claim that holistic therapy has banished symptoms that have plagued them for years — headaches, backaches, skin disorders, high blood pressure, fatigue, depression and uterine bleeding.

Smith's prescription writing is usually confined to antibiotics, heart stimulants and cough medicines. "As part of therapy," he explained, "the client must experience his feelings and pain, not suppress them." Except in emergencies, he avoids admitting patients to hospital. "Hospitals," he said, "generally have a negative effect on a person's health."

In terms of earnings, Smith ranks as one of the least successful practitioners in Ontario. According to 1978 estimates by the Ontario Medical Association, the average family doctor will gross $79,000 (net earings: $49,000) and generate about $250,000 in health costs — such as hospital and laboratory fees — through OHIP. By comparison, Smith draws under $25,000 from OHIP, and generates far less than that amount in health costs.

For a single office visit, OHIP pays a family doctor $7.20; for a full hour of psychotherapy, $28.80. On some days, Smith sees as few as a half dozen clients and the bulk of his time is taken up by low-paying psychotherapy. By contrast, it's not unusual for a busy practitioner to see 50, 60 or even 70 patients a day.

"The OHIP fee schedule penalizes you for taking time with patients," said Smith.

Before Smith embarked on his new system, every Christmas the local druggists would deliver brightly packaged gifts to his home and the homes of other medical practitioners.

Now, Smith's name has been expunged from the annual gift list, "part of the price you pay for switching to the practice of preventive medicine."

The Art of Keeping Values into Old Age

By COLMAN McCARTHY
The Washington Post

For someone who has been contributing to American thought for six decades — and dominating it, on her good days — Margaret Mead has earned a right that only a few scholars can claim: the privilege of speaking in absolutes. When asked by Walter Mondale how government can help families, she answered, "You have to begin everywhere at once." At the recent women's conference in Houston, she told the sisters and brothers that "this meeting may well be a turning point, not only in the history of the women's movement but in the whole history of the world itself." She once advised a Senate committee that America is "in a pit of deterioration, corruption, apathy, indifference and outright brutality toward the weak, the sick, the young and the poor." In Hope and Survival, she wrote that "spirtual health is a goal for all mankind."

"Everywhere. Whole. Outright. All." These are Mead words, absolute assertions meant to be driven in with a jackhammer so they don't loosen when fashion's next wind blows past. From anyone else, the fullness of such bold talk might be dismissed as mere overinflation. But what other person among us has been so careful an observer of the planet's cultures, for so long, and so resilient in furthering what she calls "the process of consiciousness?" Earlier this year, when her latest book, Letters From the Field, 1925-1975, appeared, those who had already absorbed the books about Samoa, the South Seas, males and females in America, and the blackberry days of her childhood, had still another chance to savor the vibrancy of this engaged intellectual.

It was an opportunity to reflect on Mead's unique achievement of talking to the country for more than 50 years about nearly everything — from nuclear families to nuclear power — but having it realized, finally, that she has been on the same subject all along: the continuity of values amid pressures for change. She has never called in a dictationist to her top-floor office at the New York Museum of Natural History to take down the message that this continuity sums up her vision, but the theme flows through her work like the fair wind in her Pacific islands. She has talked about it in the seminars and conferences that she is ever bolstering by her presence, as when she said that "in the end it will be the family way of life that will persevere," or in another that "the church is the boringist old thing around, but every time a country has tried to get rid of it they have had trouble."

She has written of it also in the most unlikely of places, as in the fourth appendix of a book she wrote in 1956 about the Manus people of the Admiralty Islands off the coast of New Guinea. She discusses the vulnerable position of individuals who find themselves pushed into a "transformation experience" with nothing to cling to when they come out the other side. She refers to people "who enter psychotherapy out of dissatisfaction with their relationships to family, spouse, profession, etc."

The risk is that "however much psychotherapists may affirm their intention to return their patients to the bosom of their families, there is a great tendency to connive at the simpler devices of encouraging the patient to leave home, get a divorce, and change his job or profession." However appealing this new direction may seem, from both sides of the therapist's desk, Mead is wary that its structure is too far removed from a system of patterns or from customs that have endured over the generations: "Where the individual goes through a transformation, not overtly oriented toward such an organized system — as a result of shock therapy, drugs, lobotomy, psychotherapy, in general — and finds no patterns within which to fit lovingly, but is left instead to work out an entirely new way of life, the burden on the individual may be almost intolerable."

Because she is at ease with the most diverse forms of communication — the catchy quote that reporters need for a lively first paragraph — and scholarship based on years of research, Mead has enjoyed two audiences all these decades. That she has kept the allegiance of both is due as much to her unpredictability as her intelligence. As a scholar, she rebuked those feminists who wasted their energies in such "nonsense" issues as trying to turn God into a She. On a more relevant issue, she has said that "we should not be promoting abortion as a way of life. To argue for a women's right to abortion is absurd. Women have a right to institutions which will see to it that they never have an unwanted child."

Margaret Mead is 77 now, slowing a bit but not to the point of tiring. In that regard, she is in the company of many other American women who might well be models for her in the art of keeping values — not merely the body — alive into old age: Dorothy Day, Georgia O'Keefe, Rose Kennedy. As for keeping the other most precious commodity going, our earth, Mead's enthusiasm for continuity is a lesson that needs to be taught in the first lecture of freshman anthropology: "I think the most optimistic thing is that we are still here! We have attained the capacity to destroy the planet, and haven't done it. The longer we don't do it, the better chance we have."

The Kick of Death for Life

katharine whitehorn

For film critics, who are used to murders, rapes, disembowellings and the like, Jubilee, the new punk film out in Britain last week, is probably no nastier than usual and they have been giving it respectful notices as the authentic voice of the seventies.

Not, let it quickly be said, that the film exactly depicts the contemporary scene: it takes Queen Elizabeth I by sorcery, forward to a time ahead of our own; she fetches up in a nest of punks where the girls have close-cropped dyed hair or patches painted across their faces, wear black leather or red plastic life-jackets and whose favorite, indeed only, form of fun is to collect some pretty young man, lay him, and then kill him off.

When this palls they surge out and castrate a policeman. The only remotely cosy relationship is between a pair of incestuous brothers, who are themselves shot by the police on one of the rare occasions they venture out of bed.

The Roman Catholic Westminster Cathedral gets a kick out of crucifixion orgies; Buckingham Palace has been sold to the show-biz king who runs them all — the media, all the espionage agencies. It is total nihilism, a world where "love was over in the sixties, sex is dead" unless someone can breathe a little life into it with the kick of death.

That the film must represent the fantasies, at least, of the punk people is shown by the fact that they play in it: the actors' names are as bizarre as the characters: Little Nell, Jordan, Adam Ant. And that human beings can be as vile as this we can't very well deny, with a Nazi wardress on trial even now for pushing people's heads back under the sewage in which they are drowning (an aging Hitler appears at the end of the film).

But the authentic seventies voice? The true cry of the unemployed, unwanted, alienated telly-fed generation? I wonder. Just as the artistic world took 50 years to recover from the shame of not having spotted the Impressionists, hailing painter after dud painter as the greatest, so I wonder if people aren't paying far too much attention to punk because they originally underestimated the importance of hippies, drugs, students, flower-children and all that.

The big difference was, though, that they did have a serious political thrust — finished now, perhaps, with poor old Bob Dylan sitting in Los Angeles bemusedly wondering where it all went.

Could we be paying far too much attention to the punks just because they have a recognizable tribal war-paint, forgetting that in real life they are more often the victims than the villains?

There was one element, I realize, that was missing from the ghastly film: and that, oddly enough, was fear. They all had a marvellously enjoyable time whipping each other with barbed wire and tossing their package-wrapped corpses on the London mud, but the actual adrenalin of violence is terror — and that was missing.

Those that walk in darkness know that the shadow contains more than just another orgasm, just another victim; the show-biz level of pain and sex and thrill: in the real world there is also power and the chill of tyranny.

This film is the black vision of anarchy, as George Orwell's 1984 was the black vision of totalitarianism. And it says a lot for the power of the film that by the time you blink your way thankfully back into the daylight you would almost prefer the Orwell. But I'm not sure I quite believe in it, even as a vision.

Alienation, yes; misery and more violence than there used to be; sure. But I think the colorful unemployed outrageous punk may not be quite as hideous as they and this film make out. It wasn't punks who were arrested a few days ago after a young Briton was battered to death in Norwich: accounts of the accused said they all had jeans, and long hair. And jobs.

Bawlf Eyes A Stadium

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sam Bawlf, provincial minister of recreation and conservation, has informally proposed a redevelopment of the north shore of the city's False Creek to include a 60,000-seat enclosed mutli-purpose stadium, convention and eating facilites, artificial canals, a science and industry museum and exposition pavilions.

Bawlf said Wednesday that he asked an architect to do a concept study on the redevelopment last year.

"I was looking for something to mark the centennial of the city's birth in 1986 and of the completion of the transcontinental CP rail line."

Bawlf said neither caucus nor the Social Credit cabinet has considered the concept, but Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy and a few other Vancouver MLAs have been made aware of the plan.

The redevelopment could eventually cover 200 acres now owned by Marathon Realty (80 per cent), CP Rail (15 per cent) and British Columbia Hydro (five per cent).

The stadium, the focal point of the proposal, would cost $50 million to $100 million and could be flooded to allow playing surfaces to be floated in and out on barges.

If the concept is supported by council and the provincial government, it would kill Pacific National Exhibition hopes for a 60,000-seat stadium at its site.

The city and the province have been at a standoff for a year over convention facilities for Vancouver, with each calling on the other to make the first move or commitment.

Mayor Jack Volrich said Wednesday that the city could get a substantial federal contribution for a major project marking the city's 100th birthday.

National Parks Men Score B.C. Logging

NELSON (CP) — Officials at Glacier National Park in Montana and Waterton Lakes National Park in Alberta said Wednesday that a logging operation in southeastern British Columbia is harming their parks.

Current logging operations by the B.C. Forest Service are about 13 kilometres west of the Alberta-B.C. boundary and almost adjacent to the United States border.

Clifford Martinka, assistant supervisor at Glacier park, said in a telephone interview sediment in streams flowing across the border has been increasing and could affect fish.

Martinka said grizzly bears will leave the area if logging continues, and the logging road will be used by an increasing number of hikers and all-terrain vehicles.

"Increased human access is one of the keys," he said.

"One of the last really good habitats for bears is here. If you increase human activity, it isn't going to do any good."

The forest service is logging about 1,000 acres to take out beetle-infested trees and plans to selectively log an adjacent park reserve which is next to the Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park.

The park reserve, situated between the current logging site and Waterton park, is in the Akamina-Kishinina Valley and has been a centre of controversy between the forest service and environmentalists who want the valley preserved as a wilderness area.

Parks Canada spokesman Mike Murtha, said in a telephone interview from Calgary that the parks service fears the logging will affect wildlife that moves between the valley and the two national parks.

Murtha also said chambers of commerce in Alberta and Montana communities have called for a road through Waterton park into B.C. and south into Montana. He said the logging road planned for B.C. would encourage a connecting link for existing roads.

He said public meetings have been held in Alberta on the future of Waterton Lakes National Park and the consensus is that it should remain comparatively undeveloped.

5 Inmates' Hostage Trial Set

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Five British Columbia Penitentiary prisoners will be tried in British Columbia Supreme Court starting May 29 on charges stemming from a week-long hostage-taking incident earlier this year.

Crown counsel Sean Madigan told the court Wednesday that the provincial attorney-general's office will proceed by direct indictment against Andy Bruce, Steven Albert Hall, David Bennett, Richard Lynn Wright and Ralph Lee Saumer.

The five appeared briefly in supreme court under tight security.

They are each charged with attempted murder, breaking jail, attempted escape, two counts of possession of a dangerous weapon, mischief, extortion and forceable seizure of hostages.

Defence Test Involves Forces in B.C.

B.C. defence forces are among the 12,500 North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) personnel and 400 aircraft taking part in four-day defence test that began Monday.

The quarterly exercise, called Vigilant Overview, is conducted to test how the NORAD aerospace warning and defence system would perform during an enemy air, space or missle attack.

Air crews from the 409 All-Weather Fighter Squadron at Canadian Forces Base Comox will take part in the exercise, as will personnel at CFS Baldy Hughes near Prince George, CFS Kamloops and CFS Holberg on Vancouver island.

Chinese Society In Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice W. Kirke Smith of the British Columbia Supreme Court ordered the Chinese Benevolent Association (CBA) on Wednesday to hold a general meeting and democratic elections within 60 days.

Justice Smith also placed an injunction on the CBA's current officers, preventing them from selling the association's headquaters building here, worth an estimated $300,000 to $500,000.

He granted the order and the injunction to members of the rival Committee to Democratize the CBA (CDCBA), which claims the association — Chinatown's oldest and largest charitable organization — was taken over seven years ago by the Canadian wing of Nationalist China's Kuomintang political party.

He also granted a declaration that all persons of Chinese origin who contribute to the CBA are entitled to membership in it. The CBA had contended that it was composed of various organizations and groups rather than individuals.

Justice Smith said in his judgment that "the interim rulings I have made here on purely legal problems will go some way towards healing the division; but I fear it is equally probable that I am stirring up a hornet's nest even further."

CDCBA lawyer Andrew Joe said Wednesday the decision clears the way for the first "free and democratic elections" in the association since at least 1971.

Salmon Licence Inquiry Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government should call a full-scale public inquiry in the licence limitation plan in British Columbia's salmon fishing industry, the president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union said Tuesday.

Jack Nichol said in a news release that the union demanded the inquiry from Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc because it fears vital information is being withheld from Dr. Sol Sinclair, a University of Manitoba professor now reviewing the plan.

"We feel that vital information is being withheld from Dr. Sinclair by Fisheries Service personnel and company officials that obscures the wheeling and dealing that has taken place with salmon licences," Nichol said.

"Only the formal inquiry process with its procedures for evidence and the right of subpoena of both witnesses and information will reveal fully the licence broker practises that have created economic chaos for fishermen."

Nichol said fishermen need "to know where the licences have come from,"

Thieves Hound Sally Ann

Mean thieves are still causing problems for the Salvation Army in the Greater Victoria area.

Major Ronald Walker, administrator of the Army's social services program in Victoria, said Wednesday arson was a problem here but it has dropped off in recent months with the last occurrence in December.

Walker said there is more of a problem with theft and the Langford thrift shop has been broken into twice in the past week.

"We're caught people going through our boxes on numerous occasions taking stuff," Walker said. No one has ever been charged.

He said he has considered withdrawing some of the 20 boxes scattered throughout Victoria, Sidney and Langford but hasn't done so because the Army still feels they are an important service to the public.

His comments came after reports of a sharp increase in the incidence of pilfering and vandalism of goodwill boxes in the Vancouver area.

A similar situation a year ago forced the closure of 15 Goodwill Enterprises boxes in downtown Victoria.

Ian Bremner, general manager of Goodwill here, said today there has been very little vandalism to the organization's 85 boxes located at various centres on the Island as far north as Courtenay.

"On the whole we've had no problems this year, but 18 months ago it was just awful."

He said the problems were largely solved by phasing out 15 boxes in the downtown core and keeping the Goodwill receiving station on Bay Street open until 7 p.m. weekdays and for eight hours on Saturdays and Sundays.

"We maybe don't get as much stuff as we used to, but the quality is better. The ratio of unusuable goods has dropped off markedly."

All donations give work to physically and mentally disabled persons in the agency's workshop on Bay Street.

Bremner said the problems of vandalism and theft are so great in the United States now that the larger centres have to man the boxes around the clock.

"With so many flea markets and garage sales these days people are seeing there's money to be made in cast-off goods," he said.

"I've heard of some cases where goods taken from a box have ended up being sold off a flea market next door."

Dave Carlson, executive director of Opportunity Rehabilitation Workshop in Vancouver said this week thieves and vandals are responsible for phasing out 54 of 80 boxes in the city.

"In some areas the stealing seems to be on an organized basis, with locks systematically broken," he said, adding he has received reports of trucks or station wagons hauling away boxes of goods.

The Salvation Army in Vancouver, although it too has been hit hard recently, particularly by vandals setting fire to collection bins, has no plans to withdraw any of its 42 boxes yet.

Westcoast Savings Business Booming

Westcoast Savings Credit Union president Rodger Lutz today said assets of his company rose 77 per cent to $138.7 million in 1977, moving the company from 7th largest to 4th largest credit union in B.C. during the year.

He predicted the company will double its assets to about $250 million by the end of this year.

Lutz made the statement at a noon press conference while releasing the company's annual report, showing 1977 revenues of $11.7 million, up from $6.6 million and a net profit of $657,921, up from $314,805.

Lutz also said the company today opened its seventh branch, at Hillside and Blanshard.

He said an eighth branch will open in Oak Bay village in July and a ninth is planned before year's end.

Three more branches will open in the Victoria area next year, he said.

Lutz said the Victoria payroll of Westcoast Savings has risen to just over $1 million a year, up from $648,000 one year earlier. The company has 115 employees of which 12 per cent are managers, 11 per cent are supervisors and the rest are general staff.

The company had 22,491 members at the end of December, up 36 per cent during the year.

Deposits totalled $134.5 million, an increase of $65.8 million during the 12-month period.

The company purchased a heritage house in mid-1977 at Rockland and Cook for company headquarters. Large sums will be spent on restoring the building, Lutz said.

At the press conference, Lutz said he expects deposit rates will increase half a percentage point across the board in response to action by the Bank of Canada in hiking its discount rate to 8 per cent from 7.5 per cent.

The exception, Lutz said, will be mortgage rates.

Miracle Would End Prostitution - Mayor

A miracle bylaw would be required to stamp out prostitution, Victoria Mayor Mike Young said today.

Young made the comment in response to Deputy Attorney-General Richard Vogel's suggestion that municipalities could take action through local bylaws to fight prostitution.

"I don't know how we'd do it," Young said. "It would certainly have to be a miraculous bylaw."

Vogel made the suggestion Wednesday after the Supreme Court of Canada ruled it would not hear a Crown appeal against dismissal of charges of living off the avails of prostitution laid against the owners of Vancouver's Penthouse Cabaret.

Young said the problem is one which mainly affects large metropolitan centres.

"I don't think the street problem is great enough here to create much of a problem." he said.

"I've received complaints that prostitution is not a desirable practice or profession but none about specific situations."

Young said he does not think any municipality can end prostitution by bylaw.

"He (Vogel) seems to be asking us to conceive of some ingenious plot to get rid of the problem that neither he nor the federal government can solve."

Vogel said the decision hamstrings the Crown in prosecuting prostitution cases because it means a direct evidentiary train now must be established to link money paid to a prostitute and money given by a prostitute to someone providing her services.

He said the judgment in effect compells police officers to have sex with prostitutes in order to obtain convictions.

"We must show now that the money paid by the prostitute to those providing services for her virtually came from the turning of a trick," Vogel said.

"The policeman must now have sexual intercourse with the girl, pay her, and it (the money) must go directly into the hands of the pimp."

He said marked bills would probably have to be used in the transaction.

On a related matter, senior Vancouver prosecutor Bruce Donald said Wednesday at least 100 charges of soliciting for the intent of prostitution have been stayed in Vancouver since the Supreme Court ruling Feb. 7 in favor of an appeal by Debra Hutt of Vancouver.

The court ruled that if soliciting took place in a car, it could not be construed as a crime. It also ruled that persons must make a nuisance of themselves before they could be considered to be breaking the soliciting law.

$12,000 GIVEN FOR HEARTS

Royal Jubilee Hospital's open heart surgical team has received $12,000 from Park Pacific Apartments Ltd. to cover the first year's salary of a clinical research assistant.

The cheque was presented Wednesday to Dr. Richard Brownlee by company principals Clive Piercy, Robert McAdams and Hugo Hucker.

The donation was channelled through the Open Heart Society.

Society president Don Forrest said 1,000 open heart operations have been performed in Victoria.

The society, formed 4½ years ago, has between 300 and 400 members, all of whom have had open heart surgery.

Forrest said the company's donation will assist the hospital team in its effort to computerize records of all open heart operations.

The first open heart surgery was performed at the hospital in July, 1973.

Watering Down Of CS Opposed

Managers and employees in the federal civil service are concerned about the competence of public service employees and are opposed to any watering down of their qualifications, a spokesman for a special committee set up to investigate employment practices in the federal public service said Wednesday.

The Special Committee on Personnel Management and the Merit Principle in the Public Service heard presentations from approximately 50 employees and managers during two days of meetings here.

The spokesman said management and employees want "serious qualifications established" and high standards maintained.

The employees called for tighter controls on hiring by the Public Service Commission as a means of job security, and management expressed the need for freedom in hiring, the spokesman said.

The committee, headed by chairman Guy D'Avignon, returns to Ottawa today where it will hold meetings for a month before travelling to Quebec City.

The spokesman said the committee selected Victoria for its first meetings because it is the national headquarters of the Maritime Council of Dockyard Workers, the only union in the federal service whose headquarters are not in Ottawa.

The group will also hold meetings in 16 major Canadian cities to give public servants the opportunity to express their views on such questions as how the merit principle is being applied in their experience, or what employment practices should be improved.

The committee meetings were closed to the media.

Federal Workers Protest New Ottawa Crackdown

eliminate the risk of a public service strike during an election campaign. It would give the cabinet power to defer a lawful strike considered contrary to the public interest until 21 days after the Commons resumed sitting following the election.

The action could be taken only after dissolution of Parliament, not prorogation or adjournment.

Although the amendments would exclude some employees from collective bargaining, it would also extend the right to others who had previously been excluded.

Managerial exclusions from collective bargaining would now be determined by the classification of their positions in a new and expanded managerial occupational category.

Any public servant making $33,500 a year or more would automatically be exempted. Treasury Board said the measure is necessary because in many cases the salaries of excluded managers are lower than those of their subordinates. This would remove an estimated 6,500 more public servants from union membership.

All Treasury Board employees will be excluded from collective bargaining, an increase of 299 over the 571 who are already excluded.

The new legislation would open the door for union membership to as many as 10,000 casual or temporary employees because they would become eligible after only 60 days on the job.

The present requirement provides that a temporary worker must be employed by the public service for a continuous period of six months before becoming a union member.

The shorter waiting period, officials believe, may discourage the practice of hiring casual workers because early union membership would make it more difficult to dismiss them.

As many as 3,500 public servants previously excluded from collective bargaining on grounds of confidentiality would become members of bargaining units and subject to collective bargaining. This would apply to persons who work on a confidential basis for employees who represent the government at the first stage of the grievance procedure when more than one stage is involved.

The change would reduce the number of excluded "confidential" employees from 11,500 to 8,000.

The short-term layoff provision would come into force where there was no work to be done, for a temporary period, because of a strike by another group. This, the PSAC argued, would "further erode" job security in the public service.

The lockout provision contained in the amendments would parallel the right to strike and would be subject to conditions and constraints similar to those that apply to strikes.

"If employees have the right to withhold their services, we believe the counterbalance is for us to have the right to lock them out," Andras observed at a news conference following the tabling.

Stewart argued there is "no need for the right to lockout in the federal public service because the employer, through the process of designated employees, can and does ensure that functions continue."

He suggested that if there is to be a lockout right, the process of designating employees to continue working during a strike should be withdrawn.

The proposed changes to the Public Service Staff Relations Act include official recognition of the Pay Research Bureau which has been in existence since 1957. It would provide data in support of total compensation comparability and collaborate with the provinces.

Empty Suite Breakins Soaring

Daytime robberies of unoccupied apartments are increasing, Victoria and Oak Bay police warned today.

Tenants are urged to report any unusual activities or strangers who gain entrance to apartment blocks.

City police say a number of burglaries have been attributed to juveniles and dealt with in juvenile court, but the practice is not confined to youngsters.

Thieves look for cash, jewellery, silver, cameras or other property which can be easily concealed or sold, a police spokesman said.

They sometimes gain access to controlled entrance buildings by pretending to have a delivery for a tenant, he said, or wait until a tenant is about to use his front door key before rushing up with a key in his hand while the real tenant politely holds the door for him.

Once inside, an intruder has a choice of apartments to enter after ascertaining which are unoccupied. If a strip of celluloid won't unlock a door, a short pinch bar applied to the door jamb will pop open most latches.

COSSITT—WARRANT READY

"If I'm to be arrested, I would rather have the Speaker of the House (James Jerome) be required to sign the warrant than to allow Trudeau to do it through the Mounties with an ordinary warrant."

He claimed telephone lines connected with his Commons office had "a beep on our phone in the late afternoon—it sounds like some kind of an official-type taping under way.

"It makes you wonder what this country is coming to under Trudeau when the government can use the national police force to practically besiege an Opposition MP in his parliamentary office."

In a lighter vein, Cossitt got some advice from a fortune cookie Wednesday.

"Hold your tongue, it's getting away from you," read the message inside the cookie.

TWO-PRONGED BID TO BOLSTER DOLLAR

In Europe, Canadian forces reported feeling the pinch as their pay packets shrank in relation to local currencies. See story, page 38.

Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, said in a statement that the bank rate increase — the first change since May 9 — was intended to moderate downward pressures on the dollar.

But the rate increase, effective today, which applies to the Bank of Canada's infrequent loans to chartered banks, likely means higher interest charges for consumers.

The Royal Bank, the Bank of Montreal, the Toronto Dominion Bank and the Mercantile Bank of Canada announced today they will raise their prime interest lending rates to 8¾ per cent from 8¼ per cent in the next few days.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien also announced filing of a statement with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission as a prelude to an offering of $750 million of Government of Canada bonds in the U.S.

The filing is a necessary step before sales of the bonds are permitted in the U.S. The bond issue will be the first in the U.S. in 10 years.

Meanwhile, the Canadian and U.S. economies and dollars are prime items on the agenda today in talks here between President Carter's two top economic advisers and Finance Minister Jean Chretien.

Michael Blumenthal, U.S. secretary of the treasury, and Charles Schultze, head of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, are meeting Canadian officials in what are billed as informal one-day talks.

They will discuss "what is right and what is wrong" with the economies of the two countries, one department spokesman says.

Fueled by soaring food costs, U.S. wholesale prices jumped 1.1 percent in February for their biggest monthly gain in more than three years, the U.S. Labor Department reports. On an annual basis, that is a 13.2 percent increase — double the current basic inflation rate.

Although there is a chance higher Canadian interest rates could dampen consumer spending and ultimately result in lost jobs, Bouey said the change should be helpful to the longer-term prospects for the economy.

The increase "should not have a major effect on near-term prospects for the growth of output and employment," he said.

In announcing the change, Bouey noted that since 1976 there was a substantial narrowing of the gap in short-term interest rates between Canada and the U.S. Rates in Canada have been higher.

The gap of four per cent in the autumn of 1976 had grown to about 0.5 per cent, making Canada a less attractive investment for U.S. investors.

"This change is one of the factors that has contributed to the substantial decline over the period in the foreign exchange value of the dollar," Bouey said.

Recently, U.S. authorities have increased their bank rate in an effort to keep American money at home.

But by widening the interest-rate gap, Canadian officials hope to attract foreign investment. An inflow of foreign capital would help support the dollar by tending to increase demand for Canadian currency.

Carry On, Recyclers!

New Thrust Aims to Curb The 'Throwaway Culture'

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Recycling lives in Victoria.

Though the fervor that existed when it burst forth as a national virtue seven years ago may be lacking, the re-use of disposable household materials remains a useful conservation service that is about to undergo a renaissance in Greater Victoria.

Voluntary recycling has grown from intermittent neighborhood drives for newspapers and bottles — usually by Boy Scouts or school bands — to a regular service of the Capital Regional District and a band of collection depot volunteers.

When recycling had a high profile in the early 1970s, volume reached a peak. It has not grown demonstrably since, despite a population growth, because advertising and promotion were cut back while material-handling systems were appraised.

To have encouraged more recycling without better handling capacity would have strangled the system operating out of its Borden Street warehouse, says Don Sher, who is co-ordinator of the B. C. Recycling Council.

With the addition of a fork lift truck, a glass crusher and a baling machine, the depot will be able to handle a higher volume of the three basic salvage materials — glass, tin cans and newsprint — known in the trade as the trilogy.

These items, along with clean kraft paper and corrugated kraft board — grocery bags and cartons — are marketable and help the organization to finance its services, including advertising and public education.

Both advertising and educational services will resume shortly in the capital region and the provincial council has put together its first package aimed at Grades four to seven in the elementary schools.

Volunteer worker Mrs. Olive Alexander of Esquimalt says recycling will make its best strides when it becomes part of the school curriculum.

"We would really like some kind of educational program in the schools," she said.

"So many (children) are victims of the throwaway culture. We're all part of the problem so we must be part of the solution."

Mrs. Alexander's efforts are typical of the loyal determination of local volunteers who have worked for years to encourage their own neighborhoods to save recyclable refuse, and who actually go out collecting, co-ordinating and delivering bundles and cartons of segregated waste.

Esquimalt donates space once a month to the recyclers. A shed behind the municipal hall at Park and Carlisle is open the first Saturday of each month between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. to receive clean, flattened tins, bottles separated according to color, bundled newspapers and flattened cardboard cartons.

It was the Outreach group at Esquimalt United Church that started organized recycling about three years ago.

Twice a month volunteers collected materials from four or five homes and drive them in family cars to the Borden Street depot.

As the service caught on, it outgrew passenger cars and with stockpiling it became necessary to use trucks. Meanwhile the volunteers rose from a half dozen to about 20.

Something the same happened in Langford with members of Gordon United congregation. The service is now community-wide.

Esquimalt council supports recycling but like other municipalities is not yet ready to spend money on full-time staff and facilities for collection and assembly.

The volunteers provide information and instruction sheets as a guide to householders in preparing material for salvage.

Oak Bay has the region's second-largest depot next to headquarters, says Frank Raimondo, of the CRD engineering office.

Space is provided five days a week Monday through Friday to 4:30 p.m. at the municipal yard, where volunteers do the loading for transport to Borden Street.

He said with mechanization at the central depot, the next improvement might be to institute some regular pickup service for the community at large. An example might be collecting newspapers from all the apartment blocks in a given area at one time.

Newsprint is an item that has risen in value lately with increased demand by the insulation industry and recyclers see it as a means of improving their finances to help pay for services that are 80 per cent educational.

Sher sees it as a mixed blessing. It's both a source of cellulose fibre and an opportunity for marginal insulation-makers to make a quick profit by descending on a community and clearing it of virtually all its newsprint potential before moving on to another place.

"People might get a bad taste in their mouth from those who are here today, gone tomorrow," he said.

Recycling in Fairfield has returned in the form of a depot at Sir James Douglas schoolyard the third Saturday of the month to 3 p.m., and organizer Karen McIvor said volunteers are needed to help load the truck. (Call 386-3998).

The recycling warehouse on Borden, staffed full-time by three salvagers, is open Tuesday through Saturday.

Sher told a recent energy conference in Vancouver the savings to be gained in reusing materials and recovering energy from waste that is not recyclable could add $14.5 million a year to the provincial cash flow.

Municipal governments can take advantage of initiatives such as a B.C. matching grant for source-separated cyclage to foster a conservation attitude among citizens and employees and at the same time curb energy consumption, Sher said.

Trustees Bungled Closures —Vickers

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Greater Victoria trustees turned school closure into a hot political issue through their own incompetence, former deputy attorney-general Dave Vickers charged Wednesday night.

During a public hearing at Margaret Jenkins Elementary, Vickers accused the board of negligence in several areas, including its use of the "inadequate" Facilities Study '77 as reference material for its decision to close 150,000 square feet of school space this year.

"We do not concede the closure of one square inch of school space in this district," said Vickers, speaking on behalf of the Margaret Jenkins Home and School Association.

Closure of Margaret Jenkins is impossible, Vickers said, because there isn't enough room in neighboring schools to accommodate all the students.

His statement was supported by district planner Evan Oakley, who said relocation would stretch the facilities at Monterey and Sir James Douglas schools to the bursting point and still fall 65 students short.

Vickers, now a Victoria lawyer with a child at the school, said the board was negligent in making its decision without public consultation and because it failed to consider all options.

Margaret Jenkins is the third of six schools to host a meeting on the possibility of closure or space reduction. The board has set a May 1 deadline for closure decisions.

So far, public hearings have drawn capacity turnouts strongly against closures and the Margaret Jenkins meeting was the biggest yet.

About 400 parents, students and teachers pinned on the school colors and crowded into the auditorium.

Ten briefs were presented to district administrators, including a 360-signature petition submitted by two Grade 5 students.

Briefs were read by the Gonzales Pre-School Co-operative, which rents a room in the school, the Fairfield Community Association and three teachers.

VICKERS
. . . charges negligence

In his lengthy submission, Vickers lambasted trustees and strongly criticized the Facilities '77 study which he said contained outdated facts and inaccurate evidence.

Vickers, who has a child enrolled in a special education program at the school, made a personal appeal for continuation of classes for the hard of hearing and mentally handicapped.

Declining enrolment at Margaret Jenkins has provided the school space to develop the finest special classes in the province. They are a model for other classes of this kind across the country, Vickers said.

"It is a gross irresponsibility for the board to remove special education for the hard of hearing and the mentally handicapped," Vickers said.

Such a decision would make a mockery of the educational rights of special children and their right to academic and social integration with other children their own age, he said.

Enrolment at the school has dropped 49 per cent since 1970, from 584 to 297.

'Nothing Wrong' With Monterey Alarm System

A spokesman for the Greater Victoria school district said today the fire alarm system at Monterey Elementary School is working fine.

Bill Stavdal made the comment in reference to a letter in the Times Wednesday from Bob Cunningham, a custodian at Monterey, who said the system hasn't been fully operational for more than a year.

Stavdal said at the start of the school year there appeared to be a problem with a red trouble light on the control panel which was constantly on.

However, the company that installed the fire alarm system checked it out and found nothing wrong.

Since that time the school has had regular fire drills, the latest on Feb. 16, and all the fire bells have been working, he said.

School board chairman Susan Brice said today she was baffled by Cunningham's charge because she had reports from the schools and fire chiefs about four months ago which didn't indicate any problems.

However, she asked the district to check out the Monterey system.

Cunningham made the comment about the system after stating that as part of the school district's budget-cutting measures, the supply centre warehouse will be closed by June.

He said this will mean schools will have to stock six-months' worth of supplies in whatever storage facilities they have.

Cunningham said stocking the necessary paper, Gestetner fluids and other flammable materials in quantity in the schools "only adds to the possibility of fires occurring in the schools.

Brice said the schools have stocked a lot of flammable material before.

She said she couldn't see any problem as the schools have to conform with fire marshal's regulations.

"Obviously there are adequate restrictions laid down under the fire marshal's code that we will certainly be complying with," Brice said.

Child Starts Blaze

Fire started by a child playing with a cigarette lighter caused $8,000 damage to a Gorge Road apartment Wednesday afternoon.

Victoria firefighters found the caretaker's unit at Redwood Park Apartments, 155 Gorge East, ablaze at 3:52 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. E.G. Douglas told them their grandson had been playing with a lighter, which set fire to a bed and mattress and spread to the wall, carpet, clothing and furnishings.

No More Hearings On Western Plan

The Capital Region District board decided Wednesday against any more public hearings on the proposed Western Community Settlement plan.

The last and final meeting attracted only 13 people, two of whom spoke, and lasted 16 minutes.

Saanich Ald. John Mika, together with colleague Howard Sturrock and Victoria Ald. John Hayes failed to persuade other directors that another hearing should be held before the bylaw was read.

"I don't think that it is the responsibility of people at the meeting to wait until some other supposedly important function in the area is over so people can show up," said Colwood director Howard Drummond.

Drummond's comment came after Concerned Citizens' spokesman Frank Heinrich missed a chance to speak at the meeting because he attended a Social Credit wine and cheese party.

(The meeting was delayed 10 minutes to give people a chance to show up.)

"The people here today have had plenty of input and there is absolutely no change in their position since last June," Drummond said.

"It makes a mockery of public hearing if you re-hear," Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said. "You go to the expense of a public hearing with advertisements and all the other regulations, set a time, and if no one shows up you probably wait 10 minutes in case someone wanders in late.

"But I can't see the point of having a public hearing and then doing it again because someone slept in or was at a party and couldn't make it. That is ridiculous."

There have been nine public hearings as well as information meetings during the 2½ years the plan has been prepared and discussed, said Langford director Ed Lubick.

He said the group asking for a new hearing had been heard on numerous occasions.

"I take exception to the fact that a small group gets involved and can change intelligent people's minds so quickly after we have gone through all the legal steps," he said.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier said he felt the small attendance at the meeting indicated there were few objections to the plan in its final form. Earlier meetings on the plan had drawn between 200 and 300 people.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said he felt the majority of Western Community residents see the plan as both reasonable and necessary.

The bylaw was given three readings and will be sent to the provincial government for approval.

Sooke Raft Race All Set for April

Rafts for Captain Cook?

The worthy mariner probably wouldn't have been too impressed with the sailing qualities of the motley armada of craft which will take to the water April 1 and 2.

But the event, the fourth annual Sooke River Raft Race, is Sooke's own salute to Cook in this bicentennial year.

The organizers, Sooke Volunteer Firemen's Association, are expecting more than 40 raft crews to compete for more than $500 in prizes.

The race starts in Sooke Potholes Park and finishes two and a half miles downriver at the Sooke River Flats.

There's an interesting mix of fast water and smooth, and the usual prospect of spills, thrills and laughter.

Rafts must measure at least four feet by eight. Motors, oarlocks and fixed rudders are a no-no, but paddles and poles are permitted.

Entry fee is $10 and each raft crew must consist of at least two persons.

Militant Tinge To Women's Day

International Women's Day in Victoria was a quiet celebration of the joys of sisterhood, with a slightly militant edge.

The festival of song, poetry, speeches and puppetry attracted curious shoppers passing through the Eaton's courtyard around noon Wednesday and they mingled with feminists using the event as a political platform.

Organizations in attendance included the Feminist Lesbian Action Group, members of a newly-formed union for bank employees called the Service Office and Retail Workers Union of Canada, and representatives from Rape Relief and Amnesty International.

One of the highlights of the celebration was a demonstration of Aikido, a Japanese martial art.

The idea is to appear not to resist, but rather to move in the same direction as the attacker, using his force to defeat him.

Aikido experts harmonize with the force and direct it where they want it to go, the audience was told as the form was gracefully demostrated by two women identified as Rowena and Cricket.

Pupppets were used to act out scenes of sexual stereotyping and discrimination encountered by working women today.

The audience was given a history of International Women's Day since its creation in 1916 by socialist garment workers in New York City, who were fighting for better working conditions and the right to vote.

Seventy years later, International Women's Day is a time of solidarity. This year's theme, Sisterhood Is Blooming, celebrates women's strength while recognizing still prevalent oppression in areas such as labor, day care and rape laws, the audience was told.

Workshop

The University of Victoria will hold its 13th annual neuropsychology workshop March 18-19 in the MacLaurin auditorium.

The sessions begin each day at 9.30 a.m.

Guest speakers will be Dr. Virginia Douglas, of McGill University and Dr. Robert Sprague, of the University of Illinois.

Douglas will speak on hyperactivity in children while Sprague will speak on psychoactive drugs and hyperactive schoolchildren.

Rayonier 'Double Talk'

The Sierra Club of B.C. today accused Rayonier Canada Ltd. of using "double talk" in connection with a proposal for an integrated resource management study for the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Robert W. Nixon, Sierra's regional representative, said Rayonier at private meetings with the club has gone on record favoring a land-use study for the whole of the Queen Charlottes.

"But when we asked the company to request the government for such a study it replied that it was not in the position to do so," he said.

Rayonier is the largest logging company operating on public lands in the Queen Charlottes.

Island residents, as well as conservationists, are fighting to have southern Moresby Island set aside as a United Nation biosphere reserve because of its unique plant and animal life.

The company has a 21-year tree farm licence to log the land. It was granted in 1958 for a damage deposit of $6,000 by the Social Credit Government of W.A.C. Bennett.

"The reason an integrated land-use study is important is because no other resources were considered when the government leased most of the Queen Charlottes to logging companies," said Nixon.

He also said the company has refused to supply to citizen groups factual information on their logging operations and practices, except through the ministry of forestry.

However, he added, the ministry at one time did supply factual information to citizen groups, but has since had a change of heart and treats all such matters as secret.

"The position of Rayonier on this matter raises serious concerns," said Nixon. "Each forest company operating in B.C. should recognize the need for social responsibility."

"The impending crisis within the forest-derived econony of this province leaves no other rational choice," he said.

He said there is a compelling need to avoid playing a game of brinksmanship when it involves the future economic stability of B.C.

Nixon said it was a mistake for Rayonier, an American-based firm, to apply an artificial barrier to communication with the public in its Canadian operations.

Land Claim Protection Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans an amendment to its northern pipeline legislation to ensure native land claims are not impaired by the bill.

Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen told the special Commons pipeline committee Wednesday he will propose a change that "would certainly ensure native claimsn not withstanding this bill, will exist."

Earlier this week, the committee heard native leaders describe the bill as a gross insult for its failure to even mention them or their land claims negotiations.

Both the government and the Progressive Conservative Opposition hope to place before the committee by the end of the week a series of amendments to the legislation, which sets the framework for construction of a $10 billion Alaska Highway pipeline.

MacEachen said he will consider one suggestion already made by Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) for a special committee of the Commons to monitor the pipeline construction and the activities of government agencies.

But he said the proposal will have to be weighed as part of the total package of amendments from the opposition.

MacEachen also told the committee that negotiations are continuing with British Columbia on an agreement that eliminates the possibility of discriminatory taxes by the province on portions of the line running through its territory.

A treaty signed with the U.S. says the pipeline should face only the same taxes that are imposed on similar Canadian lines.

Some progress was made in negotiations in the last week, the deputy prime minister said, but he declined to give details of the talks.

T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) said he is concerned that the provinces might get a better deal on pipeline revenue than the Yukon, which had its share set in the legislation.

Ecologist Denies Greenpeace Tag

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Dr. David Lavigne, associate professor of zoology at the University of Guelph, says he is tired of being viewed as the "Greenpeace ecologist" in the seal hunt controversy and of being misquoted by the anti-sealing movement about his research.

Lavigne says his statements have been misrepresented and he does not categorically oppose the hunt.

He said Wednesday at a seminar at Memorial University, the activities of the anti-sealing movement have had the effect of making the pelts of whitecoated seal pups more attractive than those of larger seals. This was because the whitecoat pelts are used mainly in such things as trim and are not recognized as sealskins by consumers.

This leads those who direct the hunt to put more effort into taking whitecoats, the seals the anti-hunting groups are trying most to protect.

The market that has been hurt by the anti-hunt groups is that supplied largely by native peoples in the North who hunt adult seals. These skins are recognizable as seal and harder to sell because of the hunt protests.

Noting that pro-sealing factions have done similar things in the past, he once stated that the seal population would soon be in trouble if things did not change. But, he added, many things have changed since he said that.

For one thing, seals are reproducing at a greater rate as a direct result of the seal harvest which is producing healthier pups who mature faster and mate earlier. Lavigne said this is not a widely known fact.

Landsmen Seal Take Increases

GRAND FALLS, Nfld. (CP) — Landsmen operating in small vessels out of fishing ports along Newfoundland's Notre Dame and White Bay have taken about 14,000 seals.

A federal fisheries spokesman says the number shot by the landsmen is up between 30 and 40 per cent over this time last year.

Their season opened in February and closes May 15 with the quota for the northeastern Newfoundland region set at 40,000.

Favorable ice conditions with plenty of open water between land and the ice pack has allowed relatively easy manoevering for small vessels, mostly fishermens' longliners.

Women March In Anger

OTTAWA (CP) — About 300 women marched on Parliament Hill Wednesday to mark International Women's Day and press demands for equal pay, child-care centres, and what they termed decent working conditions.

Marc Lalonde, federal minister responsible for the status of women, attended and donated $1, as did others present, to help defray costs of the march.

Lalonde did not speak at the march but told reporters that the importance of women raising a family at home was recognized by tripling family allowances in 1974. The government could not support a wage for mothers, because it would increase taxes.

The wage demand was made by the Ottawa tenants' council in a statement. "We're grown up now. We don't want an allowance any more — we want a living wage," the statement said.

Helen Levine, a professor of social work at Carleton University, told demonstrators that despite recent personal and political gains, women "must rebel against the power structure."

Among other demands made by the women were: Equal access to work and equal pay; abortion on demand and accessible birth-control information; government-funded rape crisis centres; rights for Indian women and lesbians; making International Women's Day a statutory holiday.

In Vancouver, women presented their messages explicitly as they stopped downtown traffic in their parade against what they consider discrimination by society.

One parader bent under an enormous white sack lettered Unpaid Housework, Unwanted Pregnancies.

A truck labelled Love Your Body was topped with a four-foot-high pink crepe paper uterus and fallopian tubes.

A group carrying banners lettered Rape is War held karate practice at intervals along the parade route.

Women carrying skillets and spatulas were followed by a truckload of children waving banners reading Every Mom A Working Mom.

A group declaring they were "women-loving women" carried banners saying Maybe Your Boss is a Dyke? and Look Around You, Lesbians are Everywhere."

A crowd of about 150 gathered at the Manitoba legislataive buildings in Winnipeg booed and heckled Attorney-General Gerry Mercier.

Mercier was drowned out by cries of "affirmative action" when he tried to discuss a recent report by the Manitoba Human Rights Commission on sexual stereotypes.

And he was greeted with boos when he said a report on the fate of two family law bills would be made next week.

Mercier has borne the brunt of the Progressive Conservative government's decision last fall to delay two family law bills passed earlier in the year by the previous NDP government.

The two bills were complete revisions of longstanding statutes. They provided for equal sharing of assets by marriage partners and maintenance awards made according to need rather than who was at fault for the breakup of a marriage.

STILL SECOND-CLASS CITIZENS: TORY MP

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Women still are second-class citizens in the federal public service, according to Progressive Conservative MP David MacDonald.

His accusation in the Commons Wednesday was based on figures showing that a third of female public servants earn less than $10,000 a year while only 10 per cent of their male counterparts are in this salary bracket.

But Marc Lalonde, the cabinet minister who has had the responsibility for the status of women for several years now, said that the Treasury Board has reports from all departments on their female staff and that these reports are being studied "to see whether furhter improvements can be made."

When Lalonde added that he would be "glad to see what information can be made public," MacDonald demanded why it was necessary to keep the reports secret in the first place.

The Prince Edward Island MP's attack Wednesday is a continuation of one he has maintained since he became the Tory status of women spokesman in Parliament last fall.

MacDonald took his attack a step further, accusing Prime Minister Trudeau, Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Employment Minister Bud Cullen of saying offhandedly that women were "marginal or of secondary importance to the work force."

Lalonde was indignant, challenging MacDonald to come up with one example of any statement along these lines.

"I hope the honorable member will stop peddling that kind of stuff, because I believe he is an honest man," the minister said.

Image of Violence Rapped by Group

OTTAWA (CP) — An authority on the Rastafarian religious movement Wednesday attacked an internal government document warning immigration officers to closely screen all members of the movement as being misleading and inaccurate and as sterotyping Rastas.

"Stereotypiig is often based on ignorance and when stereotyping is institutionalized, it becomes racism," said Carole Yawney, an anthropology professor at York University's Atkinson College, who spent two years in Jamaica studying the movement.

The document, released by a lawyer for seven Jamaican women who have filed a complaint with the Canadian Human Rights Commission alleging that the immigration department is discriminatory, says Rastafarians have an "unpredictable and violent nature."

The immigration department denies that the document, written in 1975 and still in effect, indicates discrimination and a federal court judge has upheld that position.

The directive also says Rastafarianism began as "an inoffensive cult" but that an increasingly anti-white attitude, use of illegal drugs and involvement "with hard-core criminal elements . . . (has) had the additional effect of making violence a trademark for many Rastafarians, the document says.

The document also says many Rastas are often found with prohibited weapons and all suspected followers of Rastafarianism should be screened closely at ports of entry to prevent criminal Rastas from entering the country.

But Ms. Yawney firmly disputes this description of Rastas, saying it bore no relation to her experience and observations of the movement.

"It's a movement of peace and love, and it's a contradiction to call them violent," she said.

Neither she nor Rene Pappone, an immigration department spokesman, had any way of telling what the violent crime rate is among Rastas in this country.

The document stresses that most Jamaicans are not connected with the movement "and should thus not be subjected to special examinations."

As well, it says, many Rastas "have no criminal tendencies" but all suspected adherents should be closely screened and their associates, friends and relatives should be carefully noted to make certain no criminal Rastas enter the country.

The document was made public during court hearings of seven Jamaican women seeking to delay their deportation until the human rights commission has heard their complaint of discrimination.

The women, five of whom are to be deported this month, say that the existence of the documents and others indicate that the department discriminates because it singles out a group of people for special treatment.

The immigration department says they are being deported because they lied about the number of children they have when they came to Canada.

The women are to appeal the decision and the human rights commission is to act as an intervenor in the case on their side.

NEGOTIATIOR HIT BY TRAM

VIENNA (AP) — Gordon Cox, 60, Canada's special ambassador to East-West forces reduction talks died Wednesday after he was hit by a streetcar, police said.

It was not clear whether Cox was trying to cross the street or was waiting for a tram when he was hit.

Cox is survived by his wife and four children. He has been accredited to the forces reduction talks since January last year.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market continued to decline moderately in active mid-afternoon trading despite a fractional gain at New York.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 2.38 million shares, up from 2.18 million at the same time Wednesday.

Declines led advances 180 to 147 with 221 issues unchanged.

Among industrials, Bell Canada dropped 1 to $53¾, Atco Industries A ⅜ to $11½, Husky Oil ⅝ to $29⅝, Imasco A ⅝ to $30½ and Alcan ⅝ to $25⅛.

Interpool Ltd. climbed 1 to $23½, Canron ¾ to $22¾, Abitibi Paper ¼ to $11⅞, Revenue Properties five cents to 83 cents and Consolidated Pipe Lines ½ to $6½.

Sigma Mines Quebec dropped 1½ to $33½, Giant Yellowknife ⅜ to $14¼ and Denison Mines ¼ to $60. Brenda Mines gained 1 to $9⅝ and Falconbridge Copper 15 cents to $4.05.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market worked its way ahead again, continuing its recent technical upswing despite some negative inflation news.

Analysts have attributed the market's recent strength to technical forces after the sharp decline of January and February, when the Dow fell 89 points.

"The market apparently found support at around the 740 level of the Dow," said Newton Zinder at E.F. Hutton and Co.

The news background, meanwhile, remained largely negative. The government reported today that prices received by manufacturers for finished goods climbed at a 13.2 per cent annual rate in February.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. The Price Company gained ⅛ at $11⅞, Inco A ⅛ at $15⅞, Seagram ⅛ at $25¼ and Bank of Nova Scotia ⅛ at $20. Zeller's lost ⅛ at $7¼, Massey-Ferguson ⅛ at $9¾, Consumers Gas ⅛ at $16¾ and Husky Oil ⅛ at $29¾. Among speculative issues, Quebec Explorers Corp. advanced one cent to 30 cents on a volume of 11,000 shares traded.

London

LONDON (CP) — News of lower-than-expected British government borrowing sent the London stock market sharply higher today near the close of light trading. The Financial Times index was up 6.4 to 453.1 an hour before the close.

Expense Accounts Thinner

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Those extra benefits doled out to Canadian executives aren't as lavish nowadays as they used to be.

In fact, says a Toronto management recruiter, things have become so tight that "some companies are even sharing jets."

Fringe benefits of this kind are known in high places as "perks" — an abbreviation of perquisites, which the Oxford English dictionary defines as casual profits or customary gratuities.

Many still available include profit-sharing, cars, private club membership, performance bonuses based on productivity, entertainment expense accounts and high-value term insurance.

About 10 years ago fringe benefits were virtually endless, officials said. But dwindling profits have prompted some companies to trim such extras along with other expenses.

Tougher tax laws also have taken a toll and some benefits are now taxable.

George Soteroff of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said in a recent interview the reduction in fringe benefits "is a reflection of the times — but an awful lot of business is still done on social terms."

He said business clubs "are a responsibility of the job" at the high executive level.

The Commerce has its own jet to get top people around the country, as do some other banks, but "the use of limousines has deteriorated immensely," Soteroff said.

Another Toronto executive, who asked that his name be withheld, said cash is top priority today for high-ranking management.

"I remember from 1961 to 1964 when there were tons of perks available," he said.

"I recall a trip I went on with four others and my boss refused to accept my expense account. It was too low. I had to try harder the next time.

"Perks fulfil basic needs — the need for growth and recognition, the recognition that you've contributed relatively more to the economy than others have."

Chuck Thomson, president of a management recruitment agency specializing in hiring for the manufacturing industry, said prospective executives still are interested in benefits but their importance is declining.

"The attitudes in the '60s were a lot looser," Thomson said. "Everything was booming."

"People were driving Lincolns rather than Chevies."

"I know a guy who was mildly criticized — he wasn't taking enough clients to lunch."

Deals on buying a house are not as prevalent as they used to be, Thomson said, adding that he knew of one man who had been offered an interest-free mortgage as part of a job-offer package.

Individuals aren't demanding perks because most now are taxable, while companies aren't too interested because they could get in hot water if they don't watch it.

"But the tax people say it's now a taxable benefit," Thomson said. "Larger firms are becoming a lot more cautious, so they're offering a 'signing bonus' — almost like for hockey players.

"The bonus might be $10,000 to $25,000, depending on the level of the employee."

Thomson said banks offer exceptionally attractive benefits.

"There's a popular saying that when you go into banking at the top that it's the golden handcuff. It gets pretty hard to leave."

However, Jim Etherington, a public relations official with Royal Bank of Canada, said Canadians do not get as many benefits as Americans do.

He said executives at the Royal have a jet at their disposal, as well as an executive dining room, stock options and chauffeur-driven limousines "because they attend a wide series of functions in a day."

Doug Caldwell of Caldwell Partners, a Toronto executive recruiting agency, said the days of the big expense accounts are finished.

"Individuals aren't demanding perks because most now are taxable, while companies aren't too interested because they could get in hot water if they don't watch it.

"There's a trend now, a very strong one, that it's better to have a job that gives you more leisure, more of a sense of a private life, and the hell with perks and the rest."

Another executive recruiter said he "had heard of a $550-tab" at a Toronto restaurant "for semi-business reasons."

"And I'd guess that at least 60 per cent of the tables at Winston's are booked by corporations," he said.

A spokesman at Winston's, a Toronto restaurant, said "probably 80 per cent of our lunches are on the expense account."

"There's very little cash around here," the spokesman said. "It's the same for dinner."

Many of the spokesmen asked to remain anonymous.

"Perks are well earned," said one. "There is a hell of a shortage of highly-skilled management."

"The pressure at that level is so different and the hours so long.

"I know a guy, for example, who comes in at six in the morning and goes home every night at eight."

Meanwhile, similar expense-account benefits in the U.S. are being threatened by tax measures proposed by President Carter.

Al McDermott, spokesman for the 6,500-member American Hotel and Motel Association, said in Washington that between 80 and 90 per cent of association members rely on business and convention meals.

Forest Outlook Mixed

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Canadian forest products industry is expected to maintain the mixed-productivity trend exhibited during 1977's fourth quarter, says Wood Gundy Ltd. in its current Guide to Investment.

During last year's final three-month period "in the east, earnings continued to accelerate due to a strong recovery in newsprint earnings, whereas western companies with heavy dependence on lumber and pulp generally showed weakening earnings patterns."

And the prognosis for 1978 is for more of the same.

"Eastern companies should record further improvements in the first half, at least," says the Toronto-based investment firm, while "western producers are likely to suffer lower results."

The monthly publication predicts that continuing high newsprint demand in the United States should raise industry operating rates two or three percentage points over last year's 91 per cent.

"Further recovery is expected in parts of the fine paper industry and some strength may develop in packaging markets," resulting in high profits for the eastern companies.

However, "plywood and pulp markets are likely to remain depressed in 1978, while lumber markets could weaken as the year progresses."

In general, Wood Gundy says, "we look for eight per cent higher earnings in the forest products groups in 1978, with results up 18 per cent in the eastern group compared with a 12-per-cent decline in western company earnings."

Investors are advised to keep their purchases within a narrow range.

"Investments in the forest products group should be limited to those companies with good leverage in newsprint which, at the same time, lack exposure to the depressed pulp markets.

"Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. and Price Co. Ltd. are the prime candidates for purchase."

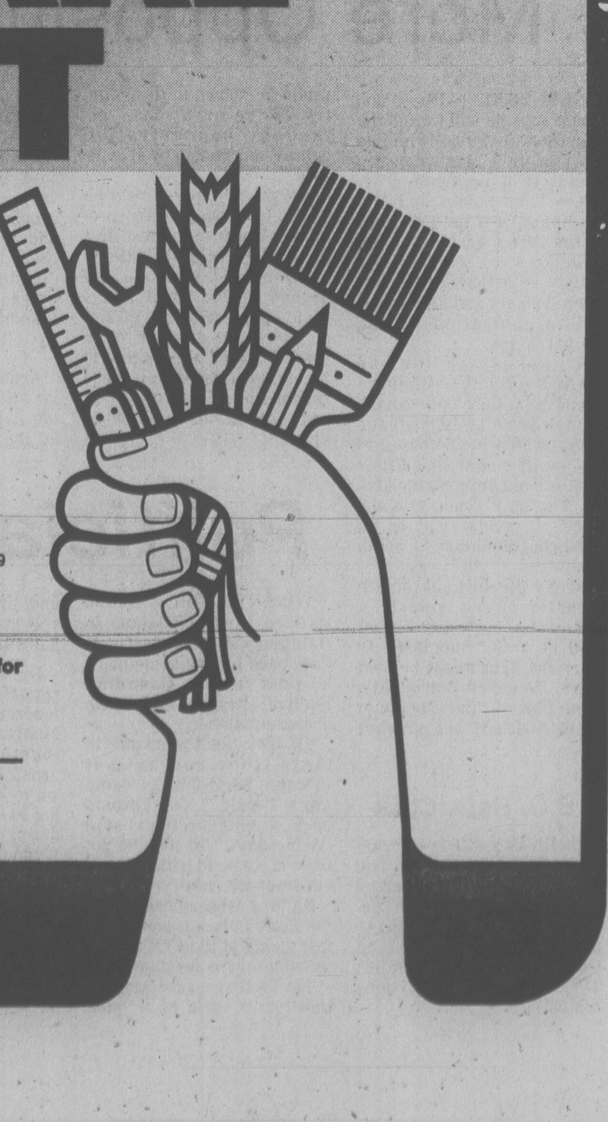
CREATE A SUMMER JOB — WE'LL SHARE THE COST



EMPLOYERS here's an opportunity to help yourself and the economy by hiring a hard-working young man or woman this summer. It's called the Youth Employment Program. If you create worthwhile jobs for young persons in your business, on your farm, or with a non-profit organization the Province of British Columbia will share the cost of wages with you.

This is how it works.

Businesses:
If your business has been in operation for at least a year, the Ministry of Labour may help you pay the wages of up to five young persons this summer. We will pay between $1.30 and $2.00 an hour as our share of the cost.

Farms:
The same rules apply, you create jobs for youth and the Ministry of Labour will share the cost with you.

Societies:
You are invited to apply for funding to hire young persons to work this summer on a worthwhile project. We will pay an average of $3.40 an hour. We will also provide funds for holiday pay, employee benefits and essential project costs.

PLEASE NOTE: All applications will be considered, but funding cannot be guaranteed.

Applications MUST be received by March 24, 1978.
Applications for funding are available from any Provincial Government Agent or Ministry of Labour Office, or any of the B.C. Youth Employment offices listed below.

Ice for Brier 'Ridiculous'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Skip Doug Harrison of Manitoba said he didn't have any idea where his rocks where going Wednesday night in the Canadian men's curling championships.

So he conceded to Nova Scotia with Alan Darragh's Dartmouth rink leading 14-1 after six ends of the sixth-round game before 6,424 fans.

High humidity in the Pacific Coliseum did strange things to the ice, mainly making it heavier than it was during the afternoon's fifth round.

"We were guessing when we threw our stones," said Bryan Wood, lead of the Manitoba rink from Winnipeg. "We couldn't cope with it and sweeping was no help."

Veteran followers of the championship, in its 49th year, called Wednesday's ice the worst in memory for the round-robin tournament.

Clifton Thompson of Kapuskasing, Ont., first vice-president of the Canadian Curling Association, said the ice was "very, very poor" and promised the situation would be rectified for today's seventh and eighth draws.

Despite the complaints, however, Alberta's Mike Chernoff and British Columbia's Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver beat eastern opponents in the sixth round to remain tied for first place with 5-1 records.

Chernoff, the Alberta skip from Medicine Hat who plays from the third position while Ed Lukowich throws skip stones, took a 6-4 win over Newfoundland's Bob Rowe of Goose Bay.

Sparkes, making his ninth appearance in the championship, beat New Brunswick's Peter Murray of Saint John, 9-4.

In other sixth-round games, Quebec's Steve Ducat of Montreal shaded Peter MacDonald and his Summerside, P.E.I. rink, 9-7, while Saskatchewan's Rick Folk topped Northern Ontario's Barry Mutrie of Kapuskasing 8-4 and the Territories — with the help of a five-ender for Howie Brazeau's Fort Smith team — whipped Ontario's Gerry Hodson of London, 12-5.

The results gave Nova Scotia and the Territories 4-2 record, followed by Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Ontario at 3-3. P.E.I. and Quebec were 2-4, while Northern Ontario and Newfoundland both had 1-5 records.

In the fifth round before 4,965 fans, Alberta beat Northern Ontario 8-5, New Brunswick topped Saskatchewan 9-6, Newfoundland nipped Quebec 8-6, Ontario bounced Manitoba 11-5, P.E.I. tripped Nova Scotia 10-8 and B.C. defeated the Territories, 5-4.

There have been complaints most of the week about the ice and the complaints reached a peak Wednesday night.

"The ice was 40 feet heavier tonight," Harrison said. "They were supposed to have burned the ice before we played . . . there's no reason to complain . . . but the ice is heavy and the rocks are going all over the place.

"The ice is ridiculous."

Thompson, also national chairman of the championship, said there were "extenuating circumstances here about Manitoba."

"One guy has a problem with his knee, another with his back. I've made it quite clear to all the skips that from here on in they must play out eight ends.

"Forget about tonight, we don't want to spoil the entire competition."

Sparkes, who had a 7-0 lead before New Brunswick came back with four on the seventh end, said: "I have to agree, the ice is almost unplayable."

Darragh humbled Manitoba by picking up two points on the first end, three on the second and one on the third.

Manitoba came back with one on the fourth, then Darragh counted four on the fifth and stole four on the sixth.

"I'd probably do the same thing if I was in his position," Darragh said. "There's a rule that says you have to play eight ends, but there also should be one that says the ice has to be decent."

Lukowich, however, had a different view.

"We struggled for a while tonight, but the ice is good and isn't causing too many problems. I missed a few shots but it isn't the ice.

"You can read it . . . it may be bad, but you still can read it. The falls are there and it's keen in the middle, but playable."

Lukowich was a winner in both draws while Manitoba was outscored 25-6.

Veteran QB Joins Raiders

OAKLAND (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Douglass, who became a free agent after the 1977 National Football League season, has signed with Oakland Raiders.

Douglass spent six seasons with Chicago Bears and set an NFL rushing record for quarterbacks by totalling 968 yards in 1972. He was with San Diego Chargers in 1975, then spent two years with New Orleans Saints.

PORTLAND, BIGHORNS HELP COUGARS

Victoria Cougars didn't play Wednesday in the Western Canada Hockey League.

But they still came up winners.

Portland Winter Hawks helped out by edging Seattle Breakers 4-3 in Seattle and Billings Bighorns lent a hand by tripping New Westminster Bruins 7-3 at Billings.

The result left Cougars tied with Seattle for second place in the Western Division, each with the same number of games played, while Bruins, who have two games in hand, are two points back of the two clubs.

It also set the stage for a meeting between the Cougars and Breakers tonight in Seattle.

The two points give Portland a virtual lock on first place in the Western Division while the other win enables Billings to challenge for the lead in the Central Division.

In the only other game, Flin Flon Bombers dumped Saskatoon Blades, 7-4.

In Portland, Wayne Babych scored his 46th goal of the season early in the third period to give Portland the win, their sixth connsecutive unbeaten game on Seattle ice.

Dale Yakiwchuk, Doug Lecuyer and Paul Mulvey also scored for Portland. Ryan Walter, Len Dies and Anthony Thomas — all three on the power-play — scored for Seattle, which outshot Portland, 46-32.

In Billings, the Bighorns scored four first-period goals to hand the Bruins a second loss on their eight-game road trip.

Blake Sullivan, with two, Dell Chapman, Cal Roadhouse, Don Nachbaur, Mike Toal and Harvie Pocza scored for Billings. Kent Reardon, Doug Derkson and John Ogrodnick replied for the Bruins.

Jordy Douglas scored two goals to pace the Bombers to the win over Saskatoon—their second in as many nights.

Glen Hicks, Terry Davis, Dave Baumgartner, Derek Brothers and Kelly Davis also scored for Flin Flon. Wes George, Ken Federko, Wayne Merkel and Rob McFarland tallied for Saskatoon.

LA Finally Wins As Leafs Fall Flat

By Canadian Press

There are times when Toronto Maple Leafs appear that they might be legitimate contenders for the Stanley Cup, but Wednesday night was not one of them.

The Maple Leafs bumbled and stumbled their way to a 5-1 loss to Los Angeles Kings in one of six National Hockey League games.

In other action, Montreal Canadiens edged Washington Capitals 4-3, Atlanta Flames trounced Vancouver Canucks 8-3, New York Rangers topped Cleveland Barons 6-1, Chicago Black Hawks nipped Minnesota North Stars 4-3 and Pittsburgh Penguins clipped Colorado Rockies, 5-3. (Summaries on page 17).

The Leafs looked as though they might have wished they were somewhere else instead of Maple Leaf Gardens where the Kings won the first time since Jan. 11, 1975. Since that time, they had lost four times and had tied once.

"We check real well against them," said Los Angeles coach Ron Stewart. "It's a good start for us on this (four-game, five-day) road trip. It's a big two points."

Two goals by Butch Goring and a 38-save performance by goaltender Rogie Vachon led them to their third triumph in four starts against Toronto this season in a chippy game which saw Vachon almost beheaded by Toronto's Pat Boutette in the second period.

Referee Bob Myers, who appeared to be having trouble keeping the game under control, had whistled play dead and then Vachon took a shove at Boutette. Boutette retalitated with a two-handed slash and took a major for the infraction. Vachon got two for slashing and the Kings' Gary Sargent was given two for charging although he could have been techically called for being third man in an altercation.

The Leafs were sloppy in their own end and did not look like a club that has won close to 65 per cent of its games this year and just 10 points away from the lead in the Adams Division.

But the Canadiens hardly looked like the best club in the league in their one-goal triumph over the Capitals in Montreal.

It took Guy Lafleur's second goal of the game and 50th of the season at 13:28 of the third period to give Montreal its 47th triumph of the season against nine losses and nine ties for 103 points.

Lafleur now has scored 50 or more goals in each of the last four seasons and continues to pad his leadership in the NHL scoring race.

The Montreal right winger had 110 ponts, eight ahead of Bryan Trottier of New York Islanders.

The Capitals now are 0-22-0 against the Canadiens since joining the league for the 1974-75 season and, in 29 games in Canada against Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver have managed only two ties, both in Toronto.

Three goals by Ken Houston and a pair by Eric Vail led Atlanta past Vancouver while in New York, Don Murdoch's three-goal effort paced the Rangers' triumph over Cleveland.

Stan Mikita scored at 16:51 of the third period for Chicago's triumph over Minnesota which officially eliminated the North Stars from first-place contention in the Smythe Division. The North Stars, with the worst record in the NHL—14-44-6—trail Chicago by 35 points.

Over in the World Hockey Association, an overtime goal by Paulin Bordeleau gave Quebec a 5-4 triumph over Indianapolis, snapping a five-game winning streak for the Racers. (Summary on page 17).

Italians Snap World Marks

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Pietro Mennea set a world indoor record and equaled another, and Vittorio Visini broke the world record in the mile walk by lopping nearly three seconds from the 12-year-old mark at an all-Italian meet.

Mennea ran the 200-metre event in 21.11 seconds to equal the world indoor mark and then broke 300-metre record with a time of 32.83.

Visini finished the mile walk at the Milan Sports Palace in six minutes, 7.75 seconds. The previous record of 6:10.2 was set in 1966.

NHL's Prices Not Justified

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader's sports consumer organization said Wednesday the average ticket price in the National Hockey League is $7.87 which, the group said, is "perhaps the most difficult to justify of all the major sports."

In a letter to NHL president John Ziegler, Peter Gruenstein, executive director of Fight to Advance the Nation's Sports (FANS), urged teams to hold down ticket prices.

"NHL owners must understand that the fans' loyalty is reciprocal, their patronage is conditional and their money is not inexhaustible," said Gruenstein, who added that the NHL ticket prices are 16 per cent above the $6.76 per ticket average of the National Basketball Association.

Gruenstein said the NHL teams play almost six times as many regular season games as the National Football League and employ only half the number players, but the ticket prices are less than $2 below the NFL average of $9.67.

"The fact that the NHL teams receive less broadcast revenue than NFL teams does not explain the small difference in ticket prices between the two leagues, especially considering that the NHL teams play many more playoff games and receive significant revenue from international play," said Gruensten.

Montreal Canadiens $11 ($15); New York Islanders $9 ($11); St. Louis Blues $8.88 ($12); Philadelphia Flyers $8.70 ($11.50); Chicago Black Hawks $8.50 ($12.50); Toronto Maple Leafs $8.50 ($13.50); New York Rangers $8.10 ($12); Detroit Red Wings $7.90 ($10); Los Angeles Kings $7.69 ($10); Vancouver Canucks $7.67 ($10); Buffalo Sabres $7.25 ($10); Pittsburgh Penguins $7.20 ($9.50); Boston Bruins $7.17 ($11); Washington Capitals $7.17 ($9.50); Colorado Rockies $7.15 ($8.80); Minnesota North Stars $7.13 ($9); Cleveland Barons $6.67 ($8.50), and Atlanta Flames $6 ($9).

More Opposition to Bout

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Arum says he will switch the proposed site for a $14 million heavyweight championship rematch in September between Leon Spinks and Muhammad Ali if the president of the African nation of Bophuthatswana is unable to satisfy objections of leaders of civil rights and anti-apartheid organizations in the United States.

A spokesman for the NAACP said the "fighters would be selling their souls" if they went to Bophuthatswana, which is composed of six small, separated areas landlocked within South Africa. The only country in the world to recognize it as an independent nation is South Africa.

Prexy Nesbitt, associate director of the American Committee on South Africa, said he was "shocked" to learn the fight might be held there. He called Bophuthatswana part of "the scheme of South Africa to set up what would be known in this country as 'reservations,' although 'concentration camps' might also be acceptable.".

Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., which owns promotion rights to Spinks' first three defences of the title he won from Ali last month, said he had invited Chief Lucas Mangope, president of Bophuthatswana, to come to the United States this week to "meet the leaders of these responsible organizations and present his position to them."

"If the leaders of these organizations are not satisfied, we will not have the fight in Bophuthatswana," Arum said Wednesday. "We are very cognizant of the political problems which may ensue and we will not offend any group in this country. If these organizations say no, it's unwise for us to have the fight in Bophuthatswana, we will not have it there."

Arum offered Mauritius as an alternative site, describing it as "an island country off the coast of Africa whose president is the president of the Organization of African Unity, the most prestigious organization of all African nations."

Ali, conscious of his image as a leader to blacks, has refused numerous offers to fight in South Africa in the past.

In Detroit, Spinks told a news conference that he wanted his first title defence to be against Ali.

"It definitely will be Ali if I defend my title against anybody," Spinks said. "Ali is the first."

B.C. Reps Click

BURNABY (CP) — Scrum half Preston Wiley and winger Rob Crieg handled all the scoring for British Columbia Reps Wednesday night as they defeated Queensland State (Australia) 13-6 in an exhibition rugby match.

Politicians Offered Ticats

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard says politicians in Hamilton can have the Tiger-Cats back for the same price he paid for the Canadian Football League club—with one stipulation.

"If they don't want me in there, they can have it (Ticats) back for the same price I paid," the Toronto hockey entrepreneur said Wednesday. "All they've got to do is come up with $500,000 out front for charity."

Ballard, whose purchase of the Tiger-Cats was confirmed last month at the CFL annual meetings here despite opposition from several Hamilton politicians, said he's "sick and tired" of politicians involving themselves in his plans for the team.

He was commenting on a report from Hamilton that federal labor minister John Munro has suggested he get together with a Hamilton group before it goes to Ottawa to seek government funding to either build a new stadium or refurbish Ivor Wynne Stadium.

Munro said if Ballard meant what he said recently about building an arena-stadium facility in Hamilton from private funds, then that would relieve the taxpayer of having to foot the bill.

He said city officials are expected to go back to Ottawa within three weeks with basic plans for the new sports facility and that Ballard's intentions should be known by then.

"I'm getting sick and tired of all this bull," Ballard said. "They (Hamilton politicians) are always anxious to spend the taxpayers money. They don't spend 25 cents of their own money.

"But they can have the team back for the same price I paid for it (reported to be $1.3 million) if they want to put up $500,000 to four, five or seven charities."

The colorful owner of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League admits there is no love lost between him and Munro and Hamilton mayor Jack MacDonald. The Hamilton mayor was supportive of Munro in a bid to find Hamilton ownership for the team despite previous owner Mike DeGroote's firm stance that the sale to Ballard would stand.

"As far as Munro goes," Ballard said of the suggestion by Munro that he meet with the Hamilton delegation going to Ottawa, "he doesn't need to enter into anything I do. He's just a joke."

Hans Leaving Paradise For Cardiff Rugby Toil

max low

So Hans de Goede, the man generally regarded as the best second-row forward playing rugby today in Canada and maybe even the best in the world, has decided to leave Paradise and go to Cardiff.

No, I'm not talking about the Garden City generally, but Paradise Street, specifically, where Hans, a 25-year-old carpenter who works for Farmer Construction, has built his own home. In August he plans to say goodbye to the Island and head for Wales where he hopes to work for a couple of years and, more important, to play for Cardiff Rugby Club.

This switch in the playing career of the guy who was born in Amsterdam and came to Canada with his parents when he was four, began a year ago. That was when Hans was over in Wales after being invited to play for a Rest-of-the-World glamor side against Cardiff in the Welsh club's centenary celebrations. He was the only Canadian to have the honor of playing (Spence McTavish of Vancouver was there as a reserve back but didn't get into the game).

Rather fittingly, Cardiff won the match, 23-14, but as his coach Tillman Briggs says, apparently Hans played "a real blinder."

So impressed were the Welshmen, in fact, that Cardiff's selector John Davies and coach John Evans have been writing to him ever since.

"It looks now as though they might see me in August," Hans said with a grin Sunday after he'd just helped James Bay Athletic Association down Cowichan, 23-3, at Macdonald Park.

Hans, a batchelor who tips the scales at around 220 pounds and stands six foot four, also currently represents the Vancouver Island (in the Crimson Tide), B.C. and Canada. After dabbling for a while in Canadian football, which he didn't like much, he switched to rugby at Vic High, where Briggs is also the coach, and he hasn't looked back.

And is he the best second-row forward in Canada?

"Without a doubt," says Briggs.

Even better than the celebrated Ro Hindson of Vancouver?

"Certainly," says Briggs.

They are both fine players, adds the coach, and are a great combination when they play together for B.C. and for Canada. But Hans, a recognized lineout expert, is the more complete player. Hindson tends to hang behind the rucks looking for a run.

No matter how good he is, Hans de Goede won't get to play for Wales unless the rules change. According to a new international rule, once a player has played for one country that's it.

But that's just what attracted the Cardiff club to Hans.

"Cardiff has so many players who are Welsh internationals that their team is often weakened considerably when they're away," Briggs explains. "To have someone who is as good as their internationals yet who is available every weekend is great for the club. He's a real find."

Despite the margin of the score, that was an exciting and at times close game on Sunday. And it was good, after some of the adverse comments that have been floating around, to see the Bays and the Green Piggies of Cowichan engaged in such a rugged but clean contest.

It was good, too, to see Barry Robbins in such fine form as he returned to the Bays' first-division lineup for the first time in more than a year.

Barry handled well at fullback, booted a penalty goal in his first attempt and to cap a great day shot into the back line and dived over for a try in injury time — and then converted it for a total of nine points. Quite a comeback!

Leier's Two Help Vikings Trip Royals

University of Victoria Vikings came up with all their goals in the second half Wednesday to drop Cosmopolitan Royals 4-1 in a first-division Vancouver Island Soccer League match at Royal Athletic Park.

John Leier set the scoring pace for UVic with two goals.

Leier opened scoring at 74 minutes. He crossed the Royals' goalmouth, drilled a shot from about 10 yards out and booted in the rebound after goaltender Steve Webb blocked the initial attempt.

Dave Secco put UVic up 2-0 with a header two minutes later.

Jim Hunter took a pass from Leier and scored the third UVic goal at 83 minutes and Leier wound things up with his second goal three minutes later.

Ian Hood averted a shutout for Royals by scoring with about two minutes remaining.

The win moved Vikings to within four points of first-place Victoria West, which meets Victoria Athletics at 2:15 p.m. Saturday in Royal Athletic.

In another Saturday match, the Vikings take on Powell River Villas at 3 p.m. at UVic.

Singles Champs Having Problems

OTTAWA (CP) — Valdimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union and Linda Fratianne of the United States are finding their figure skating titles hard to defend at the world championships but Irina Rodnina of the Soviet Union didn't have any trouble Wednesday.

Miss Rodnina won her 10th consecutive gold in the pairs event and her sixth with husband Alexander Zaitsev with ease and grace ahead of Manuela Mager and Uwe Bewersdorff of East Germany. Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner of the U.S. finished third.

Kovalev, defending men's singles champion, finished a disasterous seventh in the second segment of his event Wednesday and Jon Hoffman of East Germany took over first place going into today's free-skating final which is worth 50 per cent of the points.

Meantime, Miss Fratianne is in a tough fight to hold onto her women's crown as Anett Poetzsch of East Germany holds a solid lead after compulsory figures. Miss Fratianne was third, behind Dagmar Lurz of West Germany.

Canadians were left with little to cheer about as the best hope in the pairs event, Sherri Baier and Robin Cowan, were forced to withdraw after Miss Baier injured her right leg midway through their free-skating routine. They were trying to move into 10th place to ensure Canada two entries in the pairs event in next year's championships in Vienna.

But Lee-Ann Jackson of Brantford, Ont. and Paul Mills of Cambridge, Ont. moved from 13th to the 11th spot which had been held by Baier and Cowan.

Brian Pockar of Calgary and Vern Taylor of Toronto stand 12th and 14th in a field of 17 going into the free-skating portion of the men's singles.

Heather Kemkaren of Toronto is 10th in the women's singles after the compulsory figures which counts for 30 per cent of the marks. Cathie MacFarlane of Calgary was 17th. Miss Kemkaren could move up several positions with a strong performance today as she is within one point of Danielle Rieder of Switzerland and Carola Weissenberg of East Germany.

During Wednesday's short program, Hoffman barely outskated Robin Cousins of England to leave a tight race in the men's event. Hoffman is one point ahead of Kovalev, less than two points ahead of third-placed Charles Tickner of the United States and three ahead of Cousins.

Kerry Leith, coach for Miss Baier and Cowan, said Miss Baier appeared to have suffered a slight tear in the large muscle in the back of her right leg.

"Providing doctors don't have to operate, we expect she will be OK after six weeks rest," Leitch said.

The couple were almost two minutes into their five-minute program when Cowan lifted Sherri on a split double twist. As she came down, her toe went into the ice and she began to limp, reflecting pain every time she attempted to put weight on the leg. Doctors quickly stopped any thoughts the couple had of asking for another skate.

Sir Alf Leaving

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Sir Alf Ramsey, who guided England's soccer team to its World Cup triumph of 1966, has resigned as consultant manager of Birmingham City after only four months on the job.

Ramsey, 58, quit the post after a run of defeats. Birmingham's bad spell reached a climax Saturday with a 4-0 defeat by Coventry.

A's Wind Up In First Place

Victoria Athletics received a little help from Trilec Installations to retain the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League title Wednesday at Victoria High School.

Athletics tripped University of Victoria Jayvees 91-67 to finish their season with a 16-4 record, two points ahead of second-place Scorpions, who were edged 98-95 in overtime by Trilec in the other game.

Jim MacKay set the pace for Athletics with 22 points while Tom Holmes added 15. Greg Ross topped Jayvees with 16.

Scorpions led 44-39 at half time but Trilec came back to tie the score 82-82 in regulation time.

Doug Callbeck sparked a well-balanced Trilec attack with 17 points while Dave Speed led Scorpions with 28 points.

The regular season wraps up tonight with a game at 9 between Techline Copy Centre and Little Giant Bakeries at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Then, Athletics and Scorpions play host to the Vancouver Island tournament this weekend.

Other teams in the tourney are defending-champion Port Alberni, Chemainus, Nanaimo and Courtenay.

Action starts at 9 a.m. Saturday in the old UVic gymnasium and continues through to the 2 p.m. final on Sunday.

The winner advances to the British Columbia championship March 24-25 in Kelowna.

Chilliwack Club Stops Reynolds

Reynolds Roadrunners, the Island champions, split their opening games in the British Columbia high school girls' basketball championship tournament Wednesday in Chilliwack.

Roadrunners, competing in Section "A" of the tourney, downed New Westminster 54-45 but dropped a 51-46 decision to host Chilliwack in the second outing.

Island runner-up Victoria Tigers won their only game, edging Kamloops 42-40 in a Section "C" encounter.

Karen McComber led the Roadrunner victory, counting 17 points, while Tracy McAra and Linda Wharf each added 13.

Wharf poured in 17 points in a losing cause against Chilliwack while McComber added 14 and McAra fired 10.

Chilliwack also tripped Prince George, 53-21.

In other games, Salmon Arm Jewels added to their 83-game winning streak with a victory over Cranbrook 60-26 while Killarney downed Nelson 57-36, Carson Graham of North Vancouver tripped Prince Rupert 52-45 and Centennial of Coquitlam defeated Templeton of Vancouver, 55-38.

Round-robin play in the four-section, 16-team tourney continues today with the top two squads in each section advancing to championship play Friday and Saturday.

Meanwhile, two B.C. representatives won opening games in Canadian championship play in St. John's, Nfld.

Defending-champion Vancouver Horizons downed Alberta Makoinacs 81-38 in the first round of the national women's tournament while University of British Columbia Jayvees dropped Nova Scotia 65-57 in opening action of the Canadian junior men's tourney.

BUCKPASSER DEAD AT 15

PARIS, Ky. (AP) — The famed stallion Buckpasser, chosen 1966 Horse of the Year despite missing the Triple Crown series with an injured hoof, has died at Claiborne Farm at age 15.

Claiborne president Seth Hancock said Buckpasser dropped dead in the breeding shed. Hancock said death was caused by a ruptured aorta.

Island Stars Tackle Caps

Vancouver Whitecaps have announced that they will play their annual Victoria Cup competition in Victoria on March 22, following a pair of exhibition matches against North American Soccer League rivals.

Coach Tony Waiters will open training camp for the Whitecaps Monday at Vancouver's Empire Stadium and four days later the Caps will launch their pre-season schedule, meeting San Jose Earthquake in Santa Clara, Calif. They'll be at Portland on March 19 to tackle the Timbers and three days later the Caps will be in Victoria for the Cup contest against the Vancouver Island All-Stars.

Whitecaps announced at Vancouver this week the signing of a defender they have been seeking to bolster the club's left side. Joining the Caps as an owned player within a few days will be Steve Harrison, 24, a 155-pounder who has made more than 100 league appearances with Blackpool in the English League's second division.

Liverpool Without A Chance

LONDON (Reuter) — Any chance defending champions Liverpool still had of retaining the English league first division soccer championship all but vanished Wednesday when the team was beaten 4-2 by Derby County.

The defeat, after a 3-1 loss to Chelsea last Saturday, left the European champions tied for fifth in the table with 36 points from 30 matches, nine behind pacesetters Nottingham Forest, which has played one less match.

The Liverpool defence lacked the ultimate protection of England goalkeeper Ray Clemence, who was injured, and the match turned into a nightmare debut for young Steve Ogrozovic. Andy Crawford put the first one past him after 28 minutes and Derby took command after the interval with two goals from Gerry Daly and one from Charlie George.

David Fairclough got one back for Liverpool when the score was 3-0 and Kenny Daiglish collected the second two minutes from time.

In the second division, Stoke City moved clear of the relegation zone by defeating Hull City 1-0.

Height a Problem for Vikings

HALIFAX (CP) — Seven of the best college basketball teams in Canada are hitting the floor today to determine which, if any of them, will unseat Acadia Axemen as Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union champions.

The Axemen, ranked third among the country's teams, will face the fourth-ranked Laurentian Voyageurs of Sudbury, Ont., the wild-card entry in this year's eight-team tournament.

In other games today, Canada West-champion Victoria Vikings, tackled Wilfrid Laurier Golden Hawks, champions of the Ontario Universities Athletic Association west division; York Yeomen, OUAA East champs, face Quebec University Athletic Association champion Bishop's Gaiters of Lennoxville, Que., and Manitoba Bisons, the Great Plains champions and No. 1 in the country, face host St. Mary's Huskies of the Atlantic Universities Athletic Association.

Acadia will be trying to duplicate the performance of the Windsor, Ont. Lancers with successive titles. Windsor won the championship in 1966 and 1967.

Before sending his team out for a practice session, Victoria coach Ken Shields suggested "there isn't a really weak club among the eight."

"It will be a tough tournament," said Shields. "We know Laurentian and York are strong as are Acadia and St. Mary's. We played Manitoba once this season and they're good, too."

Giving away height to most of the other teams, the Vikings will almost certainly be counting on speed, playmaking skill and shooting accuracy in their bid the the title.

Helping in their plans is the return to full-speed action of guard Rob Parris, a slick playmaker and good outside shooter who has apparently recovered from a head injury. Billy Loos, the Canada West scoring champion, is the man most likely to put a flock of points on the board for the Vikings, who also have other capable snipers, like Reni Dolcetti.

One problem for the westerners is the condition of guard Ian Hyde-Lay, who injured a knee in practice this week.

St. Mary's coach Brian Heaney said he believed it would be "the best tournament ever."

"If we don't win it, Acadia will," said Heaney. "I don't think another team can handle them except us. We've beaten them two out of four times this season."

Eighth-ranked Wilfrid Laurier is led by the country's top scorer, Lorne Killiom, who netted 382 points in 12 regular-season games for a 31.8 points-per-game average.

Manitoba Bisons will again be led by Martin Riley, one of the best guards in Canada and recognized for his shooting and playmaking skills.

Laurentian Voyageurs, ranked fourth, have Charlie Wise, a ball handling wizard, andforward Bruce Burnett, the OUAA East scoring champ this season with 291 points and a 24.3 average.

Second-ranked York has rookie David Coulthard, a guard from Tillsonburg, Ont., and an Ontario East all-star.

Acadia Axemen have high-scoring forwards Vic Soares and Mike Hazard.

Neutron Appeal Jeered

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union presented the Geneva disarmament conference with a draft treaty today to ban neutron bombs.

The United States denounced the draft as a "one-sided propaganda exercise" trying to divert attention from serious arms-control efforts.

Introducing the draft, cosponsored by seven Communist allies, Soviet delegate Viktor Likhachev warned that development of the neutron bomb by the United States would deal a "great blow" to detente and would "unavoidably trigger retaliatory measures" by the Soviet Union.

"Those who advocate the production and deployment of the neutron weapon should clearly realize that if that weapon is adopted, our country will be confronted with the need of answering the challenge in order to ensure its security and the security of its allies," he said. "Consequently, the level of military confrontation will not decrease but will rise."

In what amounted to one of the sharpest retorts in recent sessions of the 35-nation Geneva conference, U.S. chief delegate Adrian Fisher accused the Soviet Union of hypocrisy.

"We have heard the Soviet representative and some other representatives speak of the inhumanity and barbarity of the neutron bomb," Fisher said.

"But I fear that we would wait in vain to hear them speak of the inhumanity and barbarity in the Soviet arsenal,' some of which are as much as 20,000 times — I repeat 20,000 times — more powerful."

The neutron bomb is a small warhead that would be placed on Lance missiles and artillery shells. It produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear bomb but less than one-tenth as much explosive power, heat and fallout.

Pushed In Path Of Train

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police say a 29-year-old woman pushed another woman off a crowded Times Square subway platform into the path of a train because the woman had accidentally stepped on her foot.

The victim was yanked back onto the platform by an unidentified man when the train was just 50 feet away from her, police said.

The suspect, Carolyn Spector, was charged with attempted murder.

Witnesses said the 25-year-old female victim accidentally stepped on her assailant's foot during the crush of rush-hour commuters through the Times Square station Wednesday.

Ms. Spector became enraged and began yelling. Police said the victim replied, "You can say anything you want, just don't hurt me."

But before she could move away, she was pushed by Ms. Spector down onto the track just as a train approached the platform, police said. A man quickly pulled her back onto the platform.

The woman, who did not want her identity released, was taken to a local hospital for treatment of hand and leg injuries.

Gas Suit For $160M

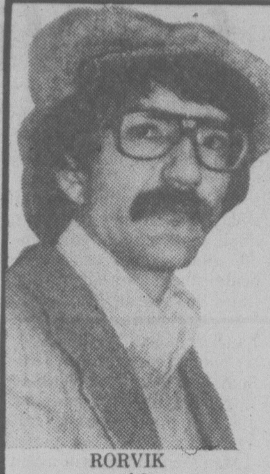
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A $160-million damage suit has been filed by the parents of a teen-ager killed when a freight train was derailed, unleashing a cloud of deadly chlorine gas.

The suit was brought Wednesday by the parents of Matt Dillard, 14, of Youngstown, one of eight persons who died as the result of the Feb. 26 derailment of a 120-car Atlanta and St. Andrews Bay Railroad Co. train.

The Dillards brought the suit against the Atlanta and St. Andrews Bay Railroad, BASF Wynedott Chemical Co. and GATX Leasing Corp.

They asked $20 million on each of eight claims.

One Doctor Believes Cloning Claim



RORVIK

New York Times

NEW YORK — The author who says that he helped arrange the first cloning of a human being insisted Wednesday in his most extensive comments on the matter to date, that the reproduction was really accomplished. But he still offered no corroborative evidence to support the assertion.

In a five-page statement issued by his publisher, J.B. Lippincott Co., David M. Rorvik also said that he had seen the asexually-produced boy, now said to be 14 months old, whom he described as "alive, healthy and loved."

Most scientists, however, continued to express strong doubt that a human cloning had been achieved or that it was even possible under current biological research techniques, but one doctor said he believed Rorvik.

Cloning, an asexual reproduction achieved by transplanting the nucleus of a donor's cell into a fertile egg cell, has been achieved under special conditions in frogs, but specialists in related areas of biology say they know of no reports of success in any mammals, although they say that attempts have been made in laboratory animals.

The book, In His Image, originally was scheduled for publication in June but the date was advanced to March 31.

But a Vermont doctor said Wednesday he believes Rorvik's story.

"Apparently, I'm about the only one," said Dr. Landrum Shettles, a specialist in obstetrics and gynecology who had 27 years of experience in embryology at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York City before he moved to Vermont in 1975.

Dr. Shettles, who with Rorvik co-wrote a book called Choosing Your Child's Sex in 1970, said that Rorvik approached him two years ago to aid an elderly New Jersey multimillionaire who wanted to create an exact duplicate of himself through cloning.

Dr. Shettles, quoted in a copyrighted story by the Burlington (Vermont) Free Press, said he told Rorvik he needed time to do research and find an laboratory. He said he heard no more of the request until the London Times recently asked him about Rorvik.

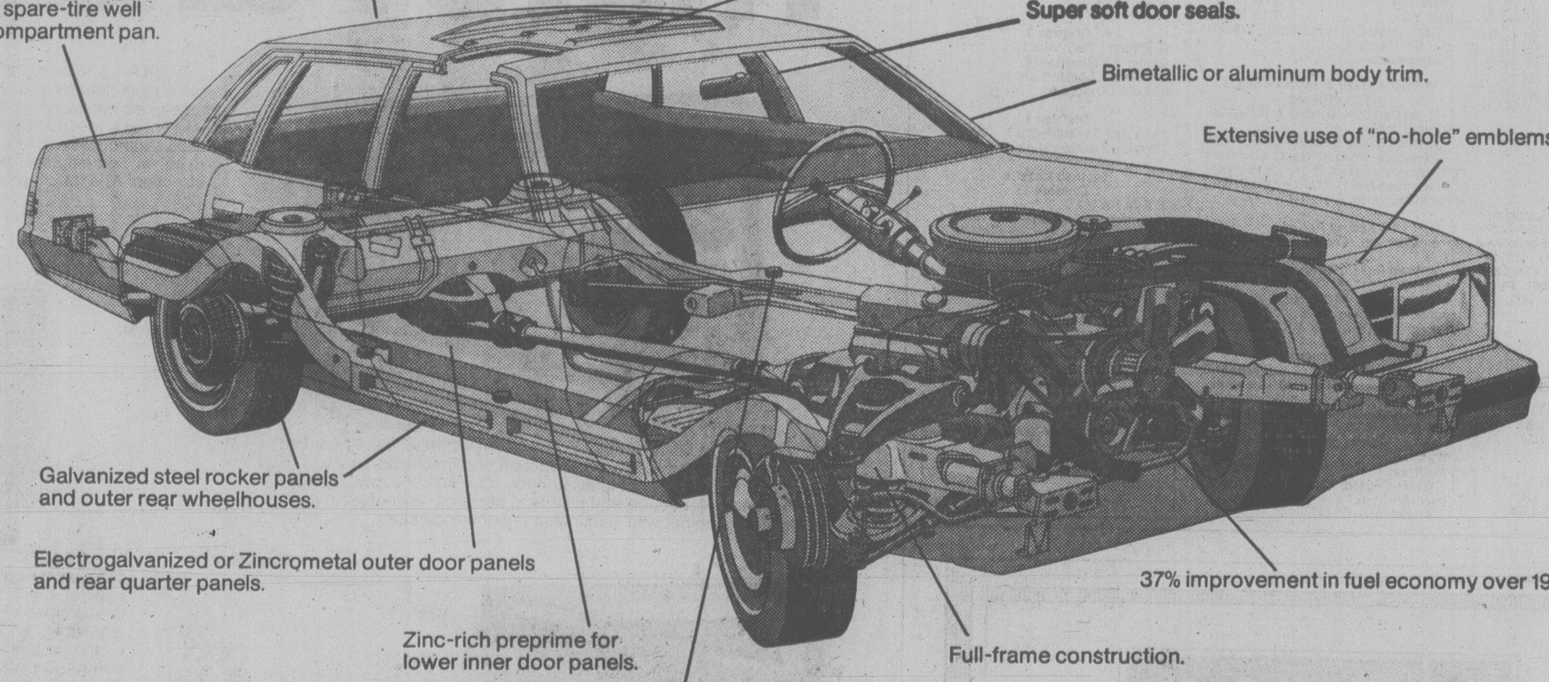
CHEVROLET Monte Carlo & Malibu | PONTIAC Grand Prix & LeMans | OLDSMOBILE Cutlass Supreme & Cutlass Salon | BUICK Regal & Century

These great GM cars are designed for quiet comfort, good looks and lasting value.



Among the attributes of any great car is the ability to hold its value, retain its good looks and provide quiet comfort. The cars listed here were designed to do just that.

With timeless styling.

New acoustical engineering techniques.

And extensive corrosion-resisting treatments which include: Specialty steels, where the metal is rolled and then dipped in molten zinc to help form a rust-inhibiting bond.

Water-repellent wax coatings that are power-sprayed on such areas as quarter-panels.

Electrogalvanized or Zincrometal outer door panels and rear quarter-panels.

And the broad use of highly specialized corrosion-fighting materials like galvanized steel, zinc-rich primers, moisture-repelling sealants, and, of course, Body by Fisher's tough acrylic finishes.

Corrosion resistance is only one measure of a great car. Quietness is another, which is why we took such great pains to build these new models that way.

First, we designed them with a full-frame construction to help provide a solid foundation. Also, up to 14 specially-tuned rubber mounts to help isolate the body from the road and running gear.

Second, we minimized noise "intrusion" in the passenger compartment with such things as super-soft foam door seals.

Third, we utilized noise-absorbing features like Body by Fisher's one-piece, foam-backed, contour-moulded carpets and headliners.

*As a group, these all-new 1978 models show an impressive 37% fuel economy improvement over 1975 models, based on Transport Canada and EPA approved test methods. And that's the kind of value you can easily appreciate.

Finally, there's resale value. And while it's impossible to predict what these cars will bring in years to come, we believe that in engineering, styling, roominess and efficiency, these cars are designed to offer the resale value people traditionally look for in General Motors cars.

The total result is a finished product you have to drive to believe.

Blackout Cripples San Diego

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A circuit breaker which was overloaded on a surge of 138,000 volts cut off power to nearly 1.2 million San Diego County residents in the area's biggest blackout ever, say San Diego Gas and Electric Co. spokesmen.

The power was off for about 4½ hours throughout the area and a couple of hours longer in some outlying regions, company spokesman Fred Vaughn said Wednesday night.

"For some reason, 138,000 volts were switched into an oil-insulated circuit breaker while it was still electrically attached to the ground," Vaughn said.

That caused a situation which Vaughn said "acted like a great big dead short."

Dozens of people were stranded in elevators when power failed at 3:11 p.m., including at least 14 elderly people at the city administration building.

Otto Bos, press secretary to Mayor Pete Wilson, said some of the elderly needed oxygen "to get them back on their feet" after rescue crews forced the elevator doors open.

Thousands more found themselves in one of the biggest traffic jams ever seen here as businesses closed early because of the blackout and freeways and streets were clogged with workers trying to get home an hour before the usual rush hour.

Civilians directed traffic through intersections beneath darkened stoplights. Hospitals switched to emergency power systems and few problems were reported.

Fire department spokesmen said several people were taken to hospitals because of heart problems aggravated by anxiety over the power outage. There were no reports of deaths caused by the blackout.

Acid Rain Eating Marble Buildings

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Acid rain and snow is causing marble buildings and statues around the country to deteriorate, but scientists at the University of Virginia soon will begin a study to measure the rate of weathering in the Charlottesville area.

The phenomenom is increasing on the East Coast as more coal and other fossil fuels are burned, said Dr. James N. Galloway, a chemist who is assistant professor of environmental sciences at the school.

"We know that sulphuric and nitric acids in rain dissolve calcium carbonate (marble), and we have preliminary evidence that buildings are being etched," Galloway said.

But he said there's no concern that the buildings will fall apart.

"The buildings will not dissolve," he said. "It's not a structural problem, just a scientific one."

Galloway said he and Thomas V. Dagenhart Jr., of Richmond, a graduate student in environmental sciences, will begin a series of precise tests on marble slabs at Birdwood, a university-owned track near campus, in order to determine the rate of weathering because of acid rain locally.

Galloway said he hopes the tests will continue for 10 years.

As the slabs weather, the researchers will weigh them monthly to determine the weight lost as a result of weathering.

"They will be weighed on an analytical balance, accurate to a hundred-thousandth of a gram," Dagenhart said. "This precision is necessary because the expected weight loss will be very small."

Besides causing buildings to weather faster, highly acid rain also can make forests grow more slowly and damage aquatic ecosystems, turning lakes acid and preventing fish from reproducing.

Parents Had Faith . . . and Baby Lived

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The doctors kept telling the parents to give up, that there was no hope. But nine-month-old Steve McLaughlin now is home after three open-heart operations and a long series of complications.

Doctors at Riley Hospital still don't see how he made it.

"They call him the miracle baby," said his mother, Vicki McLaughlin. "No baby in anyone's memory has undergone what he's done and they just can't believe he's survived."

Soon after Steve was born June 3, doctors discovered a heart murmur. He had two holes in his heart and was missing a pulmonary valve.

"They couldn't do anything about it then — he was just too small," said Mrs. McLaughlin. After 10 days, doctors sent the boy home.

But three months later the infant caught a cold that doctors said threatened his life. When the cold turned into pneumonia, doctors ordered open-heart surgery Oct. 19.

"They patched the holes but couldn't do anything about the pulmonary valve or the artery pressing on his windpipe," said Mrs. McLaughlin.

Then, on Dec. 5, a heart catheterization showed that the stitches holding one of the "patches" on the heart had broken and open-heart surgery was scheduled for the next day.

"Every time, the doctors told us not to hope, that he really had no chance," said the boy's father, James. "But we went to the chapel before and after (the surgery) and prayed and hoped. And he kept making it."

Four days after the second open-heart operation, the boy's kidneys stopped working and doctors gave him two hours to live. An hour and 15 minutes later, they started working again.

But the ordeal wasn't over. Included in the list of medical problems:

—A tube on an artery breaks, causing loss of blood and emergency transfusions.

—A pacemaker breaks down on Dec. 27.

—A fungus invades his bloodstream on Jan. 10.

—His heart stops three times in January.

The third operation came Feb. 24 when doctors gave the eight-pound two-ounce boy another pacemaker. It's an adult size and protrudes from his abdomen.

But doctors have said Steve, who went home Tuesday after being in hospital since Oct. 12, will live to grow up to it.

Hollywood 'Beyond Hope'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The rainstorms that drenched the area did serious damage to two landmarks, internationally known symbols of quirky Southern California — the Hollywood sign and the Watts Towers.

The Hollywood sign, deteriorating for decades, "is beyond hope now," the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday.

Cracks appeared in the Watts Towers and city officials barred visitors from the grounds until they can be repaired, the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday.

The chamber is going to launch a fund-raising drive.

"It's a cultural monument, one of the few on the West Coast," he said. "We're not about to just let it drift away."

Both the Watts Towers and the sign are officially city cultural monuments, though neither was built for such a purpose and both were criticized in the past — and ocasionally still are — as eyesores.

Flynt Paralysed From the Waist

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A bullet that struck Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt and lodged an inch or two from his spine has left him at least temporarily paralysed from the waist down, doctors say.

They said the bullet also broke bones and left debris in Flynt's body.

Flynt, 34, was to undergo surgery at Emory University Hospital today, three days after he and his lawyer were shot as they walked along a street in Lawrenceville, Ga., where Flynt was on trial on a charge of distributing obscenity in Gwinnett County.

"The operation hopefully will relieve pressure on the spinal column," said Andrew Jaffe, a spokesman for Flynt.

Dr. George Tindall, a neurosurgeon, said he will perform a laminectomy — removal of all or part of a vertebra.

Flynt "cannot move his legs, but he does have sensation in both legs," said Dr. John Galambos.

Flynt was transferred Wednesday to Emory from Button Gwinnett Hospital under heavy security. Jaffe said the publisher's family felt "better equipment and better specialists" were available at Emory. He said Mrs. Flynt was staying at the hospital with her husband.

17 Plead Innocent

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Seventeen men have pleaded not guilty to charges stemming from a Dec. 31, 1977, pre-dawn raid on the southern Oregon coast in which more than eight tons of marijuana were seized.

The men appeared Tuesday in federal court here before United States Magistrate George Juba. Juba set trial for May 8.

Defence lawyers indicated they expect to file numerous motions regarding suppression of evidence, indictment dismissals and discovery matters. Juba ordered that motions be submitted by the defence no later than March 27.

BERT LANCE IN CONTEMPT?

WASHINGTON (WP) — Lawyers for Financial General Bankshares Inc. asked a federal court Wednesday to cite Bert Lance for contempt of court for failing to meet with them to answer questions about his role in the alleged attempt to take over Financial General.

Instead of answering questions as ordered by the court, Lance left Wednesday for a 10-day trip to Europe for Friendship Force, a people-to-people program founded by President Jimmy Carter when he was governor of Georgia, the attorneys said.

The court papers filed late Wednesday ask for "an appropriate sanction including a citation for contempt" against Lance, the former federal budget director.

Financial General also asked for a temporary restraining order to block any attempts to gain control of the $2.2 billion Washington bank-holding company.

Police Beat Biko - Lawyer

WASHINGTON (WP) — A U.S. law school dean who was asked by the American Bar Association to attend the inquest into the death of Steve Biko has concluded that the South African black civil rights leader died as the result of a beating during interrogation by South African security police.

That finding is contained in a report, made public Wednesday, by Louis Pollak, dean of the University of Pennsylvania law school and former dean of the Yale law faculty.

Pollak's conclusion contradicts the ruling of the South African magistrate, M. J. Prins, who presided over the three-week inquest in Pretoria last November and December.

Prins found that Biko, who died last Sept. 12 while in police custody, suffered head injuries that were the likely cause of his death. But he also ruled that the injuries apparently were inflicted when Biko allegedly attacked police interrogators a few days earlier.

However, at a press conference here Wednesday, Pollack charged that the evidence and testimony at the inquest did not bear out the magistrate's finding. While conceding that his own conclusion about Biko's death was "arguable and subject to debate," Pollak said:

"At the very minimum, we could responsibly reach the result that the magistrate reached. At the very minimum, the magistrate had to say, 'The evidence does not tell what happened to this man, and further investigation is required.'"

Pollak attended the inquest as a representative of the ABA's Section of Individual Rights and Responsibilities and of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, a U.S. organization that has provided legal aid for South African rights activities.

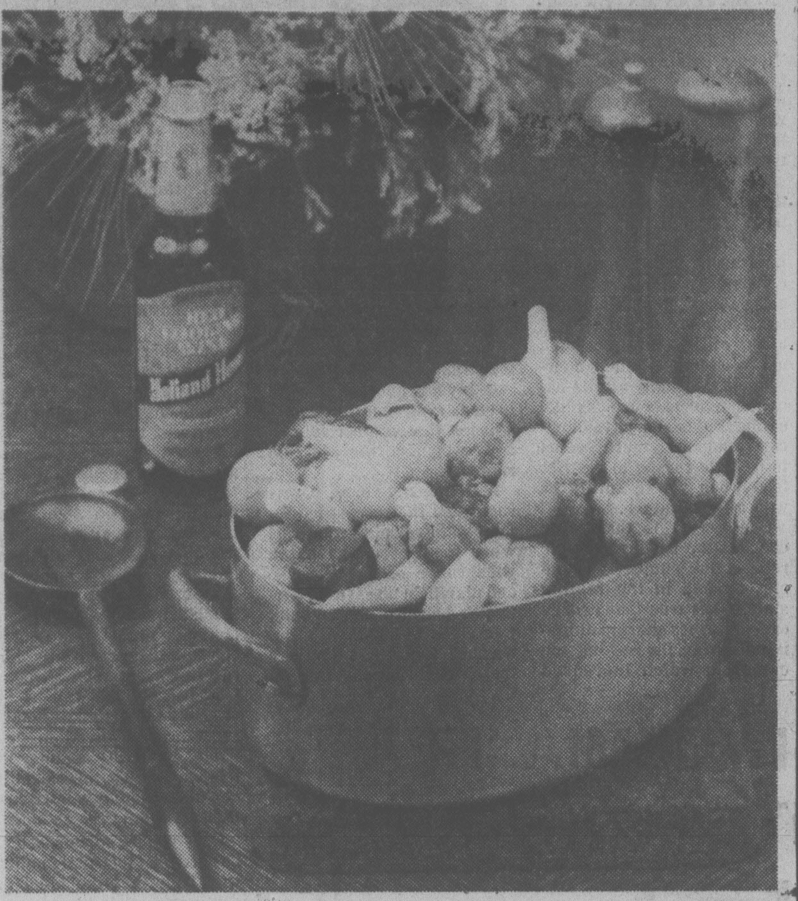
Beef Burgundy with Wine



3 pounds lean beef sirloin, chuck or round, in 1-inch cubes
2½ cups red cooking cooking wine
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
⅛ teaspoon thyme
½ bayleaf
¼ cup oil
3 tablespoons flour
1 envelope dehydrated onion soup mix
1½ cups water
5 small carrots cut in 1-inch chunks
1 8-ounce can small onions
1 4-ounce can mushrooms, or 1 dozen fresh, sauteed in butter.

1. Heat oil in heavy skillet, add beef and brown slowly on all sides.
2. Remove beef to casserole, and sift flour into oil remaining in skillet.
3. Add onion soup mix and water, and cook and stir until mixture boils thoroughly.
4. Pour over beef, cover and bake in a slow oven at 300° F. for 2 hours or until beef is very tender.
5. Meanwhile, cook carrots in small amount of boiling salt water.
6. Drain onions and mushrooms, and add all vegetables and red cooking wine to beef.
7. Bake 15 minutes or until vegetables are thoroughly heated.

QUESTION:
My job requires a great deal of travelling. How can I reduce the fat content of my diet while eating most of my meals in a restaurant?
ANSWER:
The following are a few suggestions which would help you in this area:
1. Start your meal with juice or consomme, instead of a cream soup.
2. Ask to add your own salad dressing, or better still, use only vinegar or lemon juice.
3. Choose foods which have not been fried or are served with sauces, such as poached fish, broiled steak or plain roast beef.
4. Choose fruit instead of pie or cake for dessert.
5. Try to patronize those restaurants which serve low-fat milk products, e.g. 2 per cent milk or yoghurt.

QUESTION:
I have noticed that fat parents often have fat children. Is overweight inherited?
ANSWER:
Experiments with animals have shown some evidence that inactivity and overeating can be inbred. To determine a relationship between heredity and obesity in humans, research has centered on studying families. One study has shown that if both parents are of or below ideal weight then there is only a 7 per cent chance of a child being overweight. If one of the parents is overweight, the possibility of the child being overweight is 4 per cent. Should both parents be overweight then the child has an 80 per cent chance of being overweight.

Although this and other studies indicate some correlation between obesity and heredity, we must also consider food intake. Most children form their eating habits and develop food attitudes by imitating members of their family. A family whose diet includes an oversupply of candy, soft drinks, cakes and fatty foods and second and third servings at mealtime can easily produce an overweight youngster.

To answer your question, we cannot simply attribute overweight to heredity. Food intake is the major factor. What the research does tell us is that some individuals must take more precautions to prevent obesity.

QUESTION:
How long can I safely keep fresh hamburger meat in my refrigerator?
ANSWER:
Ground meat, e.g., hamburger, should be used the day it is purchased. However it may be kept safely in the refrigerator for a maximum of 48 hours. Microbes grow quickly on the larger surface exposed by grinding the meat. Ground meat that is to be kept for longer than 48 hours should be frozen immediately after purchasing.

Israeli Chefs Discover Kosher Food Is Diverse

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli chefs are fighting the notion, at home and abroad, that kosher cuisine consists of heavy, fattening food with a limited appeal.

"We want to show people that kosher food can be good food and it can be made by very sophisticated chefs," said Uri Guttman, chairman of the first international conference and exhibition on Jewish culinary art held here recently.

The all-kosher conference drew 200 participants, most of them non-Jews, from a dozen countries for four days of workshops. Chefs from Israeli hotel chains and five countries participated in a cooking competition that featured margarine statuettes and candy candelabras, as well as traditional Jewish delicacies.

Guttman, the food and beverage director of the Dan hotel chain in Israel and chairman of the country's chefs' association, said the purpose of the convention was twofold: to promote Jewish cooking abroad and to improve the state of the art at home.

"The Jewish customer is becoming more and more important for hoteliers and caterers everywhere," he said. "And in general, Jewish food is tasty food. If you go to London and you want a good meal, you go to a Chinese or a Jewish restaurant. And in the United States, where do you get the best corned beef and pickles? At a Jewish restaurant."

The Israeli chef said food prepared under Jewish dietary law could be more diversified than many people thought.

"Most people thinking of kosher food are only considering Eastern European food," Guttman said, "Most of that came from cold climates, where people ate fatty, heavy things. But all over the world, Jews ate local food and adapted it to their kosher needs."

"If you have a little imagination, you can make almost any dish kosher," he said.

Niels Kjeldsen, a chef from Vancouver, said he found that kosher chefs "cook a lot more with herbs and spices than we do at home. I can take some of that approach back with me and I'm hoping to increase my kosher food business."

Kjeldsen was a member of the team of Canadian chefs that tied with the United States team for top honors. The cooking competition also included teams from West Germany, Israel and South Africa. Each group prepared three meat meals and one dairy meal, with five portions for judges and 100 more for guests.

POTATO SALAD

8 medium potatoes
200 ml mayonnaise
75 ml cider vinegar
75 ml water
5 ml sugar
100 ml chopped onion
1 ml tarragon
3 hard cooked eggs
250 ml chopped celery
75 ml chopped parsley
1 tomato, sliced

Cook potatoes in boiling water until tender. Drain; cool to handle. Meanwhile, mix together mayonnaise, vinegar, water and sugar, then add onion and tarragon. Pare and slice cooked potatoes. Toss with mayonnaise mixture while still warm. Chill. Chop egg whites and 2 egg yolks, reserving remaining yolk for garnish. Mix marinated potatoes, chopped eggs, celery and parsley. Chill. Chop reserved egg yolk. Serve salad garnished with salami, tomato slices and 1 egg yolk. Makes 9 servings.

VEGETABLES A GOOD BUY

OTTAWA (CP) — Homemakers who are concerned about rising food prices but want fresh vegetables for the dinner table should take a look at Canadian potatoes, carrots, onions and rutabagas, says an agriculture department publication.

The department says these vegetables now are the cheapest they have been in years.

The onion crop, grown in the Bradford Marsh area of Ontario, the Sherrington area in Quebec and south of Winnipeg, was above average in volume and of good quality. But exports have been low, leaving more for the domestic market.

Domestic carrot stocks are adequate to supply the market until the end of April, the department said, while rutabaga exports were higher than usual, a good crop last summer means the vegetable should last into the early spring.

Carrots and rutabagas should be stored in the refrigerator while onions should be kept in a dry place.

"Potatoes, onions, carrots and rutabagas are all excellent buys this year," said Reg Greene, chief of the department's fresh products section.

"They are not always marked as Canadian produce in the stores, but regulations require retail outlets to indicate the country of origin for imported vegetables. If there is no indication, consumers can assume they are buying a Canadian-grown product."

Learning to Love Didn't Work

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago I married a man whom I had been dating for only one month. I didn't love him at the time, but he loved me, and he was such a kind and decent man that I thought I could learn to love him. I married him for security.

Six months later we adopted a baby boy. (He was my sister's child — she wasn't married at the time, and it seemed the best solution to her problem.) Also, my husband loves children and was very eager to adopt this child. I didn't really want a family so soon, but I couldn't turn this precious little boy away.

Now I realize I can't "learn to love" anyone, and it's futile to try. We are separated now (for the third time this year), and I want a divorce.

I am not a flighty, pleasure-seeking woman, Abby. I am simply being honest with myself and am facing my true feelings.

I feel completely justified in what I'm doing. But if I haven't done anything wrong, why do I feel so guilty?

MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: Because you knowingly entered into a loveless marriage for selfish reasons. You don't mention your husband's reaction to all this, but if he still loves you, he's probably hurting over the prospects of losing you and his newly-adopted son. And that's why you feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the person who was looking for an alternate to the traditional cigars handed out on the arrival of a new baby.

We had a baby last October, and being a non-smoker, I had no intentions of handing out cigars. Instead, my wife boiled three dozen eggs and wrote "IT'S A GIRL" on each one with a pink felt-tipped pen.

It made a great hit in the office. — RON G.

DEAR RON: Considering that an "egg" started the whole thing, you hatched a great idea!

Don't Worry if Fever's Fed

Food for Thought

By Dr. JEAN MAYER and Dr. JOHANNA DWYER

Q. I was raised on the "feed-a-cold-and-starve-a-fever" theory and have fed my two children very lightly when they have a flu-type infection. Recently, I read that it is neither necessary nor wise to eat lightly when fever is present. Is this really true?

A. Traditionally, typical fare during acute illness has consisted of foods such as clear soups, thin gruels and tea. Since loss of appetite is often quite common with many infections, such nourishment is usually all the patient can tolerate or feels like eating. But from a physiological standpoint, there seems to be little reason to restrict food when you're sniffly or with a temperature.

One reason is that fever elevates the basal metabolic rate, or the number of calories burned in the resting state. (It is true that energy expenditure is sharply diminished during illness, but the extent to which increased metabolic needs are compensated for because of this has not been established.) If there has been an inadequate intake of calories, body fat stores as well as protein are burned for energy. Finally, the daily need for amino acids is met by breaking down body tissues.

Obviously, there are good reasons to provide adequate amounts of both protein and calories as soon as the patient feels ready to eat.

Q. My neighbor claims that breast milk contains substances that protect infants against infection. Is she right?

A. For many years, it was suggested that breast-fed infants in developing countries were protected against a wide range of infections — and diarrheal diseases in particular because human milk was clean to begin with and because there was no way that it could be contaminated. That was and still is true. Moreover, in the last few years it has been shown that human milk also contains a number of special substances that afford natural protection.

One of these substances, called the bifidus factor, helps the baby develop its own infection-fighting bacteria. Another agent, called lactoferrin, is an iron-binding protein found in the whey of breast milk. By making iron unavailable, it can, under certain conditions, inhibit the growth of harmful bacteria. Still other immune substances participate in the defence against infection by binding viruses and bacteria, thereby preventing them from invading the intestinal lining.

Lysozome, another protein found in much higher concentration in breast milk than in cow's milk, apparently has two important roles. It combats bacteria as well as increasing the activity of other substances involved in providing immunity against infection. Finally, breast milk contains as many infection-fighting white cells as blood.

Q. If yogurt is supposed to be nutritionally equal to milk, why is it that the label on whole milk yogurt says that one cup provides 150 calories, while in my calorie book, whole milk is listed at 165 calories?

A. To begin with, in all likelihood the value for milk in your calorie chart is an average of several brands, while the value listed on the yogurt label may represent an average of several batches of only one brand prepared according to the exact specifications of a single manufacturer.

Beyond that, however, it is really not practical to worry about differences of as little as 15 calories. The tools to measure and weigh foods are simply not precise enough, nor do they need to be, to achieve such a high level of accuracy. Moreover, many factors both in the raising and processing of food result in some variations in the caloric content even between two apparently identical products. In the long run, purely random differences tend to balance out.

More important to the success of your diet is that, as you count calories, you make sure that the size of the serving you eat is quite close to the portion specified. For example, if you eat an apple measuring 3¼ inches in diameter, it probably contains about 120 calories, not 60 as in a 2½-inch diameter piece of fuit.

HYPERGLYCEMIA 'REAL' DESPITE MYSTIQUE

your health

Lately, I've been hearing so much about hypoglycemia and I seem to have the same symptoms of other people who do have it. I don't want to get involved with expensive tests and treatment. I understand that diet is the important thing. Would you give me the diet for hypoglycemia so I can try it out?—Miss L.E.R.

Dear Miss R.:

I'm almost as confused by your letter as you are by your speculative disease.

Hypoglycemia has, for some reason, captured the imagination of the sophisticates for whom an ordinary disease is not quite adequate. The mystique about this condition is attaining epidemic proportions. Homemade diagnoses are traded by friends more readily with this condition than almost any other.

Hypoglycemia is a very real disorder. There is no guesswork about this important condition. When it is suspected by a physician, very definite and conclusive tests of the blood sugar level can prove or disprove the existence of hypoglycemia.

A five-hour glucose tolerance test can demonstrate a curve of the rise and fall of sugar in the blood. This graphic reading can definitely establish the diagnoses of hypoglycemia. Only then are diets and drugs used to control the condition.

Are you quite sure that your other friends really have hypoglycemia or are they, too, involved in self-diagnosis, as you are? I have tried for years in these columns to avoid too much emphasis on symptoms that might be identified with one particular disease. Some readers who are already tense and concerned would then be able to say, "That's exactly how I feel; therefore, I'm sure that I have that sickness too."

Symptoms of various unrelated illnesses often resemble each other very closely. Identifying with one or more symptoms can give some people the feeling that they have a serious illness when in reality none exists.

Now, I am deliberately departing from this rule in order to point out how foolish it is for anyone to make her own diagnosis of hypoglycemia based on the presence of one or more symptoms.

Fatigue, double vision, emotional upset, sweating, dizziness, hunger-weakness, headache, tingling sensation of the fingers and toes, inability to concentrate, drowsiness, palpitation of the heart, irritability and nervousness are all symptoms that might, indeed, be associated with true hypoglycemia. But every one of these symptoms, singly and in combination, might also be produced by illnesses totally unrelated to hypoglycemia.

It is obvious, therefore, that guesswork plays no role in determining this or any other diagnosis.

Sorry, no diet for your undiagnosed hypoglycemia!

'Easy' Dish For Winter

Washington Post

"Easy" in cooking, as in athletics or academic pursuits, is a relative word. Nonetheless, here is a seasonal main course that is easy. The most difficult procedure may be obtaining the vegetables; and should that prove too difficult, substitutions or subtractions are easily made.

The first course, if there is one, could be light. Try a clear soup or cold fish dish. Fruit, either pears or apples at this time of year, are ideal as the basis of a dessert.

ROAST OF PORK WITH WINTER VEGETABLES
(8 Servings)

Boston butt of pork, about 6 pounds.
Sage
Rosemary
Dijon-style mustard
Salt and pepper
5 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, sliced
¼ cup Calvados or Bourbon, and 1 tablespoon
2 cups chicken stock or bouillon
8 medium turnips, peeled and quartered
1 pound carrots, peeled, split lenghtwise and cut into 2-inch pieces
1 pound parsnips, peeled, split lengthwise and cut into 2-inch pieces
16 Jerusalem artichokes, peeled
2 large bulbs fennel, each cut into 4 wedges
2 teaspoons sugar (approximately)
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups warm chicken stock or buillon.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cut 2 or 3 slices of fat from the pork roast and render fat in a dutch oven or another pan large enough to hold the meat. Sprinkle roast (at room temperature) with sage and rosemary, rub with mustard.

Remove rendered fat, add 2 tablespoons butter and when it sizzles, begin to cook roast, turning it to brown all sides. When suitably seared, season with salt and pepper and and onion slices to pan. Transfer to oven and cook 2½ to 3 hours, checking temperature with a meat thermometer and removing the roast after internal temperature reaches 160.

Meanwhile, or the morning or day before, prepare the vegetables.

When roast is cooked, remove it to a platter and let the meat set before carving. Pour all but 2 tablespoons of grease from pan and transfer ¼ cup to a large skillet. Add 2 tablespoons butter and reheat. Add all vegetables except fennel. heat and toss to bronw lightly, seasoning lightly with sugar, salt and pepper. Remove to serving bowls and sprikle with chopped parsley.

Meanwhile, heat Calvados, ignite and pour it into pan with drippings. Shake over heat until flame dies, then add flour and stir without burning until it darkens, 2 to 3 minutes. Add stock and stir with a wooden spoon, scraping bottom of pan, until a sauce forms. Let simmer while slicing meat.

Pour sauce through strainer into a fresh pan, season with salt and pepper and bring to a boil. Off the heat stir in a final tablespoon of butter and a tablespoon of Calvados. Pass in a sauceboat.

Abortion Law Needs Action

elizabeth forbes

That the visible issue of abortion has been bad for the women's movement in Canada, and that it has polarized people and taken attention away from other very important issues concerning women, may indeed be true.

Nevertheless, we can't ignore it because the present law is inadequate.

That is the belief of Florence Bird, chairman of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada, who writes and broadcasts under the pen name Anne Francis.

The Royal Commission, you will remember, was appointed in 1967 and presented its report in December, 1970.

With this in mind, the office of Dr. Julie Loranger, co-ordinator of the status of women at Ottawa, decided to discuss with Mrs. Bird where we are — with more than 10 years of effort behind us — and how much we have yet to do.

In the course of the interview, she said that "the shortage of hospital abortion committees means that many women are not getting the relief they need."

Only about one-third of the hospitals in this country have committees.

"The rich can go to the United States, while the young, the ignorant and the poor are discriminated against. Women in rural areas and the North often have no place to go for help."

That to reduce the number of abortions, we need so much more in the way of free family planning information. "There are only about 100 clinics in Canada and we need about 700."

That we especially need good family life education in the schools. "Many families are not able to discuss these things and don't communicate with their children."

That something must be done about changing attitudes in the next generation.

"You must teach boys and girls that there are obligations on both sides; that responsibility for children must be shared; that people take on a great responsibility when they bring someone else into the world."

Florence Bird looks back and ahead

And that a young teacher (male or female) with very little experience of life, should not teach family life education.

"It must be a wise, experienced person who has been given an in-depth course in child psychology and family relationships, probably someone from outside who could go into many schools and speak with students."

Out of 122 recommendations to the federal government from the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 50 have been totally implemented and 54 partially implemented, Florence Bird pointed out.

"Only one of the most important, concerning abortion, has not been carried out."

Perhaps the "most important single recommendation" implemented was to set up a federal commission on Human Rights.

"It should be able to do a great deal to bring an end to discrimination against women when they go out to work.

"And there's plenty of discrimination. The gap between men and women's pay has been widening."

Asked about the decade ahead, Mrs. Bird said "it's time for re-evaluation so that we can concentrate on the most important issues for women."

And those issues?

The old one of women in the labor force, of course.

"As long as women are considered part of a pool of cheap labor, particularly when times are hard and a higher paid man is let go to retain a lower paid woman, you are never going to have good labor relations."

Other top priorities, in the Bird thinking, are equal pay for work of equal value; better supervised day care centres; discrimination against any group on the basis of sex or marital status and greater concentration on reform of marriage property acts in various provinces.

In connection with marriage property she said "it's difficult for many men to regard marriage as a partnership of equals with equal rights and responsibilities."

Therefore "since men still dominate the power structure in our society, women will have to go on putting maximum pressure on governments.

"They will have to use the power of the vote to elect people who have undertaken to change outdated laws."

Questioned as to whether she is optimistic about the future, this outstanding Canadian woman said she was "encouraged because attitudes have changed a good deal in the past 10 years."

She warned however, that she sees a danger "that there are many other concerns which will have high priority in governments" and that many people think these things are more important, right now, than what is happening to women.

Asked about the fact that some are saying married women are taking up essential jobs that men should have and that if these women went back into the home, unemployment would decrease, Mrs. Bird said she had heard all that during the depression days of the 30s.

In those days married women were not allowed to teach in the schools and big corporations refused to employ them, she remembered.

"It would be incredibly unjust if we tried to turn the clock back and do that again. And I don't think it would be possible now because over 41 per cent of all married women have some sort of paid jobs."

They are working, she said, "because inflation has made two pay cheques a necessity in many families."

And furthermore, "the majority of single parent families are headed by women, and their pay cheque is essential for survival."

Did she think the time had come for a second Royal Commission, or a review or update, she was asked.

Her answer was "oh, no, I don't think it's time for that yet, not until all our recommendations have been carried out."

2 ml salt
25 ml oil
250 ml sliced onions
250 ml thickly sliced mushrooms
25 ml cornstarch
50 ml beef bouillon
1 package (340 ml) frozen green peas

Trim all fat from meat and cut across grain in very thin strips (3 mm thick and 3 cm long). Combine garlic, soy sauce, 75 ml bouillon, Worcestershire sauce and salt. Add meat and stir to coat with mixture. Allow to stand 1 hour at room temperature, stirring occasionally. Heat wok or heavy fry pan until hot. Add oil and continue heating until very hot. Add meat mixture and stir-fry until meat begins to brown (about 4 minutes). Remove meat from pan. Add onions and mushrooms and stir-fry until mushrooms are slightly soft (about 3 minutes). Combine cornstarch and 50 ml bouillon; add to vegetables. Add peas and stir-fry until sauce is thickened and peas are heated through (about 5 minutes). Return meat to pan to reheat and blend favors (about 3 minutes). 6 servings.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A former accounts manager of a local branch of Royal Trust was charged in Victoria provincial court Wednesday with 11 counts of theft over $200 and one count of fraud in the amount of $29,006.78.

Luis Guzman Acosta, 29, now of Richmond, was charged in the theft counts with taking amounts ranging from $4,800 to $1,000 between Jan. 23, 1976, and Jan. 9, 1977. Acosta was charged in Victoria provincial court Jan. 27 with theft of $12,935.54 from Royal Trust.

Defence lawyer Bruce McConnan's application to waive Acosta's rights to a preliminary hearing on both sets of charges was granted by Judge William Ostler, who committed Acosta for higher-court trial.

McConnan elected trial by judge without jury on all charges.

"It seems to me you're determined to test the system to see how far you could go," Ostler said to a 19-year-old before sentencing him for breaking and entering.

Steven Philip Reginald McKeil, 1830 Old Island Highway, pleaded guilty March 3 to a break-in earlier that day of McIvor's Fish and Chips, 1822 Old Island Highway.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court McKeil and 19-year-old Kenneth James Smith, of the same address, were spotted by Willaim Gordon Allen of Allen Security, hiding behind a tree at the fish and chip shop. They admitted breaking into the shop because they were hungry.

Lang related a criminal record for McKeil which included three counts of breaking into the same restaurant in 1976, for which he received a suspended sentence and a year's probation. He was convicted of breaking and entering again on Oct. 19, 1977, given another suspended sentence and placed on two years probation.

Ostler noted that the last pre-sentence report made reference to giving McKeil one more chance and said that except for Lang's more-than-fair position, he would have sent McKeil to jail this time.

"If I sentence you again, you won't get one day less than six months," Ostler warned.

He fined McKeil $500, placed him on three years probation, ordered him to perform 200 hours of community service work and ordered McKeil to obey a 9 p.m. curfew for four months.

Smith has been remanded until March 30 for sentencing.

Three 20-year-olds charged with pulling daffodils out of a planter on Douglas Street were fined $100 by Ostler, who told the trio that "people in this area are proud of their gardens."

Brian Hans Koster, CFB Work Point, Kenneth John Morton, 943 Esquimalt, and Murray Stan Ritchie, also of 943 Esquimalt, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Lang told the court the three were spotted at about 3 a.m. Wednesday pulling daffodils out of a planter in the 1200-block Douglas. When questioned by Ostler, however, Lang was unable to explain how an estimate of $200 damage was arrived at for the 11 plants.

One of three teen-agers charged in the Feb. 25 break-in of Mais Furniture, 1821 Cook, pleaded guilty while the other two elected trial by judge without jury and had a preliminary hearing date of March 29 set.

David William Holst, 19, entered the guilty plea on charges of breaking and entering and possession of stolen furniture and home appliances. Holst, who has been in custody since his arrest, was remanded until Thursday for sentencing.

Jointly charged with Holst were Kelly Norman Lambert, 18, and Bernard John Strating, 17.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: David Charles Smith, 19, of 1830 Old Island Highway, $500; Wendi Susan Beaton, 24, formerly of Kelowna, $450; Stephen Finlay Kennedy, 18, address not known, $450; Donald Theodore Ayres, 20, of 974 Dunford, $450; Randall Lee Vowles, age and address not given, $450; Colin Purnell, 30, of 2002 Kaltasin, $400; and James Douglas Butterfield, 18, of 3231 Heatherbell, $350.

TRAFFICKER SENTENCED

Michael Patrick Knight, 19, was sentenced to six months in jail after pleading guilty in county court Tuesday to trafficking in MDA July 19 in Esquimalt.

Judge Leslie Cashman ruled the sentence will be served concurrently to time he is already serving.

Acquitted, in Six Minutes

A 23-year-old Saanich man was acquitted of a charge of obstructing a policeman after only six minutes deliberation Wednesday by a county court jury.

James Brian McWilliams was accused of wilfully obstructing Esquimalt constable Iain Hooey Sept. 30 in the execution of his duty.

Hooey told the jury he went to the Bacchanalia Cabaret on Esquimalt Road at 2:30 a.m. where 10 to 14 people were fighting. He arrested one man for breach of the peace and took him to the entrance way of the nightclub.

While there, he said, McWilliams appeared and said if the constable took the arrested man to jail he would have to take him too and "I'll f---ing do a number on you" and "I'll f---ing kill you."

Hooey said he twice told McWilliams to stop interjecting and warned him that a charge of obstruction may be laid. He released his hold of the arrested man for a few moments while talking to McWilliams.

He said the arrested man didn't leave the scene and no charge was laid against him. McWilliams disappeared.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart told the jury it was a simple case which had come before them because the Crown proceded by way of indictment rather than summary conviction procedure and McWilliams had exercised his right to a jury trial.

The issues were: Was what McWilliams said and did an obstruction of Hooey and if so, did he do it wilfully.

He said "obstruct" meant to hinder, impede or retard "but there are degrees. I say to you . . . that word does not include a trivial or insignificant effect."

Offensive words, even threats, are not in themselves an obstruction unless they have an effect of some substance, "a substantial adverse effect of hindering" a policeman.

Before the jury retired, defence counsel David Wilson said it is not obstruction of a policeman to be drunk and foul-mouthed and there was no law against speaking to a policeman.

He said he could yell and scream and use foul language against a policeman but, unless it interfered with or did something to obstruct a policeman, he wouldn't be guilty of obstruction.

The issue, he said, was not what was said to the policeman but the effect on him. And he said the biggest effect on Hooey was that he took his arm off the arrested man for a few seconds and the man didn't run off.

"If it's obstruction, I'm a monkey's uncle," he said. "The most that can be said of the Crown's case is that if it was an obstruction, it was a trifling one."

Crown counsel Michael O'Connor called only one witness, Hooey.

The jury's six-minute deliberation was believed to be the shortest, at least in recent memory, in Victoria courts. The longest deliberation was 13 hours and 45 minutes in B.C. Supreme Court in 1976 when a man accused of rape was found guilty of attempted rape.

Public Announcement

Ottawa, February 28, 1978

FM-CLOSED CIRCUIT AUDIO SERVICES ON CABLE TELEVISION

In its public announcement of February 25, 1977, the Commission noted that its Cable Televison Regulations and Policies issued on November 26, 1975 and December 16, 1975 respectively, required that closed circuit audio services not authorized by the Commission for carriage by cable television licensees be discontinued.

In view of the fact that this policy affected many existing closed circuit audio services involving ethnic and student programming services, and because it became apparent that few operators of such services had found alternative means to distribute their broadcasts, the Commission twice extended the deadline of the time required for compliance with this policy. In order to allow further study of the programming, legal, licensing and other aspects of this complex issue, the Commission extends until further notice the deadline for compliance with this policy. This extension applies to all cable television licensees carrying closed circuit audio services for which they were not authorized by the Commission and which were in operation on or before December 16, 1975.

Stella Finds Bliss 'Just Plain Folks'

TWISP, Wash. — After years as a movie star and Hollywood sex symbol, Stella Stevens says she is "just plain folk" around this central Washington farm town. And that's the way she likes it. "I've found people up here that I enjoy being around," says the 39-year-old actress, who moved to a ranch near Twisp last year after nearly 17 years of bright lights and mansions.

BOSTON — Back home in Monaco, they call her "Your Serene Highness," and Princess Grace was serene indeed Wednesday in Boston. Decked out in sable, a bright purple silk dress and at least 85 carats of diamonds, she dominated a champagne reception for the benefit of the Boston Ballet.

BEVERLY HILLS — Judy Carne, facing three criminal actions in two states, pleaded innocent Wednesday to a misdemeanor charge of possessing one-fourteenth of an ounce of marijuana. The 38-year-old "sock-it-to-me" girl of the old Laugh-In television series is free on bail awaiting trial April 3. Six days after the marijuana arrest in West Hollywood, Miss Carne was arrested in Santa Monica on suspicion of auto theft and narcotics possession — no formal charges have been filed as yet on that one. But Miss Carne also faces trial May 3 in Cincinnati on drug abuse charges involving heroin and possession of an allegedly forged tranquilizer prescription.

LONDON — Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke kept a step ahead of the law today giving press, radio and television interviews and avoiding police trying to serve him with an expulsion order. The 27-year-old grand wizard of the Klan, said he would appeal Home Office orders that he leave Britain by tonight.

RIO DE JANEIRO — Prince Charles, who says he wants to learn the samba, will have his chance tonight when he attends a performance by the Beija Flor samba school. Mayor Marcos Tamoio is offering a dinner and reception in the prince's honor, to be followed by a performance by experts from the school, which won first prize in this year's carnival parade.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. parole commission ruled Wednesday that Carmine Galante, reputed to be one of the most powerful Mafia chieftains in the U.S., must remain in prison at least until the spring of 1980. Galante entered prison in 1962 on a 20-year narcotics sentence but was given early release in 1974 because of his good behavior record. He was returned to custody last October for alleged violation of the terms of his parole through associating with underworld figures.

LONDON — The original text of George Bernard Shaw's play Heartbreak House was sold Wednesday by Christie's for $47,700. The manuscript, purchased by a London dealer, has many deletions and alterations, showing how Shaw's ideas changed during the play's writing. The manuscript was put up for auction by the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art.

LOS ANGELES — A payphone call to announce the birth of his firstborn, Anthony, cost Vietnamese refugee Da Van Doan $1,900 in cash, his life savings. Doan, who came to the United States from Saigon in 1975, said Wednesday the money was in his wallet, which he left behind in the telephone booth after he made his call. He had intended to pay the hospital bill with the cash. Doan said he reported the loss to authorities at Harbor General Hospital where Anthony was born to Doan's wife, Duc. But he is more hopeful that "anybody who picked up that wallet understands our history (and will) return it even if not all the money is there. I think when I get the hospital bill I will tell them I'll make payments because right now we don't have enough," he said. "I don't know what I can do because a lot of bills are coming up."

Princess Grace

Romanian Defects

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Gabriella Dinu, an 18-year-old Romanian tennis player, did not join her team-mates when they flew back to Bucharest on Monday night and Italian authorities believe she may reappear to seek political asylum.

Victoria Not For Sale

LONDON — On a slow news day in London Wednesday an evening newspaper headlined, Yanks Want Victoria Station! and sent travellers into a whirl.

The lead story in the Evening Standard reported that a formal offer had been made for the Victoria train station by an unnamed American buyer who specialized in antique stations.

The offer, sent through the Seattle law firm of Felix and Zimmer, first went to the Department of Trade which passed it on to the British Export Trade Board before it reached the British Rail Property Board.

A railways spokesman said however, "We are not selling the station — we could hardly do so with 170,000 passengers passing through Victoria every day."

The station, built in the early part of the century, had no real antique value.

RESURRECTION SET FOR SUNDAY

HARRISON, Ark. — Tent evangelist Daniel Aaron Rogers, who has kept his mother's body frozen since she died more than a month ago, plans to try to resurrect her Sunday.

A resurrection ceremony has been tentatively planned at the Clarkson Funeral Home in Reeds Springs, Mo. Rogers said the service will be open, although he and three pastor friends will be praying in a private room.

"We don't plan to unfreeze her," he said. "We plan on the Lord — if he's got the power to raise her, we feel like he can also warm her body at the same time, and we don't have to thaw her out."

The Bridge Expert

When today's deal was played in a national championship event a few years ago, every one of the 78 North-South pairs who played the deal obtained a plus score (each for fulfilling his contract, whatever it was). The deal embodies a type of percentage play which every expert would handle correctly, whereas the non-expert would feel that it was a guessing situation.

East-West vulnerable.
South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ◇.

The above bidding sequence took place at one of the tables. West's opening diamond lead was taken by East's ace, after which East returned a diamond to South's king. Declarer next led a trump to dummy's ace, and returned the jack of trumps. When East played low, so did South.

Another trump lead to South's king now picked up East's queen. Declarer next cashed the club king, after which dummy's jack of clubs was finessed successfully. The ace of clubs was then played, felling West's queen and East's ten. With South's remaining club now being the only club remaining, South claimed his contract with two overtricks.

On the face of it, it may appear to be a pure guess whether to finesse against East or West for the queen of trumps. But such is not the case. It is, of course, a 50-50 proposition whether East or West had the trump queen.

However, if West has the Q-x-x-x of trumps, while the initial trump finesse against the queen would be successful, West would eventually win a trick with the trump queen; whereas if East possesses the Q-x-x-x of trumps, the initial lead of a trump to dummy's ace, followed by the lead of the jack, will avoid the loss of a trump trick: if East covers the jack with the queen, it will be taken by South's king. West will fail to follow suit.

Dummy will then be entered via a heart, and the board's last trump will be led. East's remaining 9-x will now be entrapped by South's 10-8.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, March 10
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Elements of luck, timing, popularity ride with you. Moon in your sign, plus numerical factors, point to success, broadening of vision and outlook, resumption of cash flow. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Check details, be aware of behind scenes activity, be discreet, but also let others know you are not without allies. Aquarius, Scorpio figure prominently — so does the number 4. Accent on some restrictions, delays, medical checkup.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight friendship, romantic desires, fulfillment of hopes, wishes. One who is articulate aids you in resolving traumatic situation. Virgo, Sagittarius persons could play key roles. Yes, make the change. Love is very much a part of your personal scenario.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Climb to a more elevated position. Accent on standing in community. Some persons, who are envious try to start a rumor factory — with you a central target. Stand tall above it. Your views will be vindicated despite elements of deception.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Obtain hint from Cancer message. Don't take motives of others for granted. Some around you are resentful, though they grant you grudging admiration. Plan ahead for publication, travel, educational program. Define terms, make position crystal-clear.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Breakthrough indicated. Mystery is solved. Money situation is clarified — involves partner, mate. Cancer, Capricorn figure prominently. Bring priorities into sharp, clear focus. Member of opposite sex feels you owe something more than lip service. Do you?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on consummation of deal, special arrangement, agreement — partnership and marriage. Don't force issues. Lie low. Observe signals, hints, subtle innuendoes. Circumstances tend to "take over." You are on a tobbogan ride. Hold tight!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): God lunar aspect coincides now with work ethic, health, unique services, dependents. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently as you gain opportunity for new starts in new directions. Surprise element works in your favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on creativity, affair of heart, conflict between emotion and logic. You can collect what you need. Key is to analyze data, to build for future. Cancer, Capricorn figure prominently. Stick with number 2. Get valid property appraisal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Accent practical matters. Be familiar with basic issues. Do your homework. Someone may be preparing "surprise questions." Gemini, Sagittarius figure in scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ideas bear fruit — what had been whistling in the wind becomes productive. Close neighbors, relatives are in picture. Another Aquarian — and a Scorpio — could figure prominently. Mail, short journey fit into your personal pattern.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on costs, protecting concepts, formats, valuables. Communicate, go out of your way to make contacts, welcome challenge. You could meet one who excites and inspires you. Gemini, Sagittarius, Virgo figure in scenario.

IF MARCH 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are creative, independent, passionate and stubborn. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. June could be your most significant month of 1978, a year featuring collections, payments, promotion of material and emotional security. If single, marriage is stressed. Married or single, you could go into business for yourself or build or buy a home.

ONE Pea for Early Sowing

There are two kinds of Vegetable pea seeds, smooth coated and wrinkled. Success depends on using the correct kind for the condition of the soil and the temperature at sowing time.

The difference between the smooth and wrinkled seed is in the amount of starch or sugar contained.

When moisture is extracted from starch the bulk does not lessen a great deal. The smooth seeded peas are mostly starch.

Sugar loses bulk when moisture is removed. Wrinkled seeded peas have a high percentage of sugar, and the wrinkling of the coats is due to the smaller area needed by the sugar content after the seed is dried.

The smooth seeded peas, those containing mostly starch, are the extra early and early varieties which can be sown as soon as the soil is in a condition for working. These tolerate damp and cool soils.

The wrinkled seeded varieties need a dryer and warmer soil for germination. In a wet soil the sugar content will absorb a quantity of moisture. This moisture coupled with low soil temperature causes the seeds to rot.

For success with vegetable peas it is important to select from the many varieties available the ones that are suited to soil and weather conditions at the time of sowing.

In general, local soils are not ready to receive the wrinkled seeded kinds until late April, and in some low lying areas not until mid-May.

The smooth seeded varieties, because they are mainly starch, are not as sweet tasting as the wrinkled seeded which have the higher percentage of sugar. If sweet flavored peas are desired the gardener must wait until conditions are right for sowing the wrinkled seeded varieties.

Possibly the sweetest of all peas are the Sugar-pods.

This type crops heavily because the pods are picked for eating before the seeds start to develop. Th vines continue producing pods until frost in their effort to make seed. Sowings can be made in April if soil is workable, and repeated later if needed.

With the introduction of varieties which will crop in hot weather the enjoyment of fresh vegetable peas is no longer limited to late spring and early summer.

Wando is the name of the heat resistant variety which has given good results for several years in local gardens.

Since there are so many varieties of peas, and other vegetable seeds, available today, a good seed catalog or list stating the varieties best suited to the different parts of Canada should be part of every gardener's reference library.

In the home garden we can make frequent small sowings using varieties that will crop in our normal summer temperatures, and make a final sowing of an early variety in mid-July, this providing a constant supply throughout the growing season.

If the main crop of peas is wanted for canning or freezing be sure to select varieties recommended for these purposes, since they will mature the entire crop in two pickings. These varieties are not for the gardener wishing two pickings a week over a long period.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our very sincere thanks to the many friends for the messages of sympathy on the loss of my loving husband, Rev. Canon A. W. Atkinson and father of Nelson and Ruth.—Alice Atkinson

309 IN MEMORIAM

GANNER — To the memory of beloved parents, Rymond, who passed away March 9th, 1971, and Myrtle Florence, April 3rd, 1976.
We still have the empty heartache,
We still shed many a tear,
And always a loving memory
Of the parents we loved so dear.
To some they may be forgotten,
To others a part of the past
But to us who really loved them
Their memory will always last.
The beautiful things they did for us,
Live within our hearts each day,
And keep them near and dear to us
Though they have passed away
To hear their voice, and see their smile,
To sit with them and talk awhile,
To be together in the same old way,
Would be our dearest wish today.
Goodnight Dad, Goodnight Mom.
Remembered always by daughter Loretto Goddue, son-in-law Don and Grandchildren Myrtle and family and Colleen.

CLARK — In loving memory of George Leslie Clark, who passed away March 9, 1968.
If I had one lifetime wish,
One dream that would come true
I would pray to God with all my heart for yesterday and you.
If teardrops were a staircase,
and memories a lane,
I would walk all the way to heaven,
and bring you home again.
A thousand times I've needed you,
A thousand times I've cried,
If all my love could have saved you
Dad, you would have never died.

MEARON — In loving memory of a dear Father and Grandfather, Dave, who left us March 9, 1976.
Memories will always linger.
—Daughters Eleanor and Dickie, plus Grandchildren.

LORD — In loving memory of a dear Husband, Father and Grandfather, Al, who left us March 26, 1976.
Memories will always linger.
—Wife Eleanor, daughters and grandchildren.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE. SANDS

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Even the Wolf Is Bugged

WASAGAMING, Man. (CP) — In an era of electronic eavesdropping, even the lowly wolf is finding it hard to get privacy.

Wolves in Riding Mountain National Park in western Manitoba are being fitted with radio transmitters and their movements monitored.

The four-year research program is being conducted by the Canadian Wildlife Service in hopes of determining how vulnerable animals are to outside forces.

The wolf was chosen because of its wide-ranging territory and its frequent confrontations with farmers intent on protecting their animals.

"We want to see what it takes to protect it," says Dr. Lu Carbyn.

Birds Dammed?

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP) — A community group is asking for a 20-square-mile wildlife refuge on the Slave River that would save a pelican colony from a planned hydro dam.

The Pelican Portage Group, in its proposal, says it aims to preserve in a natural state the Slave River Rapids between Fort Fitzgerald, Alta., and Fort Smith.

The world's northernmost colony of white pelicans nests on islands just below Mountain Rapids, about midway between the two towns.

BCDC Criticizes Rupert Grain Site

VANCOUVER (CP) — Don Duguid, president of the British Columbia Development Corporation, criticized Wednesday the federal government's choice of a site for grain and coal terminals at Prince Rupert.

Transport Minister Otto Lang announced Tuesday that $16.3 million would be spent during three years to provide rail and road access to Ridley Island waterfront, west of Kaien Island, on which Prince Rupert stands.

The work would provide sites for a coal-loading facility and one or more grain terminals.

Duguid said two BCDC-commissioned reports favored Casey Point on Kaien Island as the best site for grain terminal development.

C. D. Howe Western Ltd., which did one of the reports, said Casey Point "is superior to any proposed for a terminal on the West Coast from the point of view of access for large ships and access by rail."

"This is an ideal situation for the design, engineering and construction of a grain terminal and leads to relatively economic construction costs," the report said.

Duguid said Casey Point provides the potential for superior moorage for ships, as it is sheltered from winds and Ridley Island is not.

He also questioned whether grain terminals at Ridley Island can be built quickly enough to meet rising grain exports through the West Coast.

"It is going to be three years before things are ready to go ahead at Ridley Island," Duguid said. "What we want is extra grain storage capacity now."

Dr. William Hick, chairman of the grain co-ordination committee of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce, said the decision to develop at Ridley Island would mean that the federal government investment would benefit both grain and coal terminals.

He said the BCDC site appeared the superior one for any grain terminal development, but added he was happy something was done to hasten elevator construction, regardless of the site chosen.

The plan was given a mixed reception by far, with industry spokesmen on the Prairies calling it a mistake in priorities.

The project is a good long-term plan, but the money might better have been spent on improving the railway system, Bill Marshall of Regina, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool second vice-president, said.

Alberta's Pool and Pioneer Grain Co. Ltd. have invested $60 million of farmers' money in increased capacity at Vancouver and on the Burrard Inlet on untested and as yet uncompleted projects, Marshall said.

That gives the grain firms a 40-per-cent increase in handling and storage capacity in Vancouver that has not yet been tested to determine whether it meets present needs. The government should have made its first priority improved rail access to Vancouver where the new capacity will be, Marshall said.

The Saskatchewan Federation of Agriculture will discuss the decision Friday at its board meeting, federation executive-director Gary Carlson said from Regina.

Hooker Profits Invested

VANCOUVER (CP) — Profits from a Vancouver-Edmonton-Calgary prostitution ring using at least 12 women were laundered and invested in legitimate businesses here, county court Judge John Spencer was told Wednesday.

Crown counsel William Smart, outlining charges against three men and a woman of conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution, said evidence would show that several people in the three cities decided to combine activities in one main company.

He said the company had a corporate structure, operated out of a city building which contained a control room for radio dispatching of prostitutes and provided babysitting service for mothers working as prostitutes.

Smart said thousands of dollars were sent regularly to Vancouver headquarters from prostitutes and pimps in Edmonton and Calgary before police raids in the three cities brought it to a sudden end.

Charged are Jack Carothers, Sydney Carothers, Russell Richardson and Monica Brunhoffer.

The trial continues.

Bid-Splitting Eyed By Dredging Firms

TORONTO (CP) — Several companies tried to divide bidding for public dredging contracts in Canada into eastern and western sections, but could not agree on how this could be accomplished, a witness told Ontario Supreme Court Wednesday.

A memo read by Horace Grant Rindress, former president of J. P. Porter Co. Ltd., said that eastern and western dredging companies met in 1969 and tried to reach an agreement that western companies would not compete for work in the East and the eastern firms would not bid on Western jobs.

The memo, written in November, 1969, by Rindress to Jean Simard, then a Porter vice-president and director, said that in the spring of 1969 westerners were able to extract favors from a large eastern company in that they were not bidding on a major project in Quebec.

Eight businesses and 11 individuals have been charged with conspiring to defraud public agencies of more than $4.2 million by rigging bids on dredging contracts.

The trial continues.

NANAIMO ASKS FOR GOV'T AID

NANAIMO — City council has completed a brief asking the provincial government for $24 million to offset the costs of amalgamation.

The submission also asks the government for assurances there will be no changes in the grant formulas for services.

The brief asks for a $1.4 million grant to upgrade the fire department, $2 million for an expansion to city hall and unconditional cash grants of $4.7 million as well as a grant of $1 million a year from 1978 to 1980 to develop a trunk storm sewer system.

Also sought is a road-upgrading grant of $14 million.

The brief says that roads are below standard and many need repaving.

CUPE Talks Will Resume

KELOWNA (CP) — Agreement was reached Wednesday for the resumption of contract talks between 12 Okanagan centres and their civic workers.

The agreement was reached after the British Columbia Labor Relations Board met separately with the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Okanagan-Mainline Municipal Labor Relations Association.

The union went on strike in Revelstoke last week, and refused to bargain in the other 11 centres until the Revelstoke dispute was settled.

The OMMLRA refused to settle the Revelstoke dispute unless the union agreed to bargain collectively in all 12 centres.

After Wednesday's round of talks with the labor relations board, the civic bargainers agreed to drop action planned against CUPE in return for a continuation of negotiations, although the Revelstoke strike will continue.

Contract talks will begin immediately in Summerland, with bargaining in Kelowna set to begin March 29. The issue of contracting out work to private companies is at the centre of the dispute.

Kidnap Squad

Terrorist Threat: New York Firms Next to Be Hit?

By LEONARD BUDER
New York Times

NEW YORK — Concerned that the rash of kidnappings by terrorists that has plagued other countries may spread to New York City, the police department has quietly set up and trained a 70-man task force against kidnapping.

As part of the training, the detective bureau has staged a number of simulated abductions, including one in which the "victim" was an executive of a corporation that has actually paid millions of dollars in ransom to real kidnappers.

In the exercise, the "kidnappers" eluded the detectives and escaped with half a million dollars in "ransom." But the exercise, which was deliberately made extremely difficult, was regarded as a success because it pointed up deficiencies in the task force that, officials said, have since been corrected.

"If we are going to make mistakes, if we are going to be fooled by the unexpected," said Capt. Francis R. Herron, an aide to the chief of detectives, "we want this to happen during training when we can do something about it."

The kidnapping task force is made up of detectives and supervisors from the bureau's special investigation division. Each member is regularly assigned to one of the division's seven squads, such as auto, bond and forgery, or missing persons.

But each has also been trained for the special assignment in case there is a kidnapping by a terrorist organization, which might be seeking a ransom to finance its activities, to obtain the release of colleagues in prison or to call attention to its case.

"So far, we have been fortunate," said Inspector Robert T. Pirro Jr., the commanding officer of the special investigation division. "There has not been that kind of a kidnapping here. But we have to be prepared. If we are, we can eliminate the immediate confusion that occurs when a major case suddenly breaks. Within minutes, we should be ready to go."

Elsewhere, however, authorities — and those who became the victims of kidnappers — have not been so fortunate.

Baron Edouard—Jean Empain, a Belgian nobleman and one of Europe's wealthiest industrialists, was kidnapped in Paris, and his abductors demanded millions for his release.

Last October the body of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, a leading West German industrialist, was found six weeks after his abduction by terrorists belonging to the so-called Red Army Faction. A few days later, the same terrorist organization kidnapped a wealthy Dutch businessman, Maurits Caransa, in the centre of Amsterdam. He was released after five days for a ransom of more than $4 million. Other kidnappings for ransom have occurred in Italy, West Germany and South America.

Such kidnappings have forced many major corporations in Western Europe, Latin America and even the United States to take elaborate security precautions, including the use of armored limousines driven by chauffeurs who double as bodyguards and have been trained to avoid terrorist ambushes.

In New York City, police officials have worked closely with representatives of dozens of large corporations to tighten security and develop procedures in case there is a terrorist kidnapping. The first thing each corporation is supposed to do is to notify the office of the chief of detectives.

It was such a call at 8:36 one morning to John L. Keenan, then the chief, that set in motion last June's kidnapping exercise, the most elaborate of the four that have been held so far. It was also the first to involve the active participation of a major corporation. The name of the corporation has been withheld because of the company's sensitivity over past kidnappings.

The "victim" and his wife and the corporations's comptroller were not only parties to the staged drama, but they also followed scripts written for them. But the detectives working on the "kidnapping" did not know it was only an exercise until it was over, nor did they know that their actions were being monitored.

The operation produced a number of fast-breaking developments in midtown and lower Manhattan, in which detectives had to first follow the courier with the ramsom on foot and by car through congested streets and heavy crowds and then later on the subway.

At 2:20 that afternoon, the "ransom drop" was made on the concourse level of the World Trade Centre. The "kidnapper" walked to the concourse, entered 1 World Trade Centre and, before the watching detectives could do anything, boarded an elevator just as the door closed.

On the 82nd floor, "kidnapper No. 1" handed the ransom to "kidnapper No. 2," who put the money in an attache case and then took an elevator down and left the building. "Kidnapper No. 1" changed his jacket and put on a tie, to alter his appearance, and also left the building undetected. The script provided for further developments, but with the "kidnappers" having evaded the police, the exercise was called off at this point.

"We always lose in these exercises," Inspector Pirro said. "I think if we had followed him into the elevator and everything else had gone right, at the last minute a helicopter might have swooped down out of nowhere and whisked the "kidnappers" away.

"The point is, of course, to make these exercises difficult so that we can learn from our experiences," he said. "After each exercise, we go over what happened point by point and critique it."

The written critique of the June exercise disclosed that while there was much that was well done, there were also a number of flaws.

Since that exercise, task force supervisors have worked on making sure that such effors will not be repeated in an actual kidnapping. Particular attention, for example, has since been given to training detectives in surveillance techniques, including the use of sophisticated electronics equipment.

"Our people have learned a lot from their experiences," said Chief Keenan, who is now on pre-retirement leave. "I just hope they never have to really demonstrate how well they have learned their lessons."

Soldiers in Germany Caught in Dollar Drop

LONDON (CP) — Canadian soldiers and airmen and their families in West German NATO bases are feeling the economic pinch resulting from the devalued Canadian dollar in relation to German currency.

Despite a complicated indexing system designed to adjust servicemen's pay in times of inflation, military families find their buying power has deteriorated. The value of the Canadian dollar eroded about 23 per cent against the deutschemark in one year.

"I don't think you can plead real hardship yet," one officer said in a telephone interview from the Canadian Lahr base.

"However, one of the incentives to serve here was the opportunity to travel and see Europe. The dollars just aren't there now for that sort of thing and it's the lower ranks who are hardest hit."

There are 5,000 Canadians stationed at the army base at Lahr and the air force fighter base at Baden-Soelingen. Civilian workers and dependents bring the total Canadian contingent to 14,300.

"We're feeling the pinch, but it's nothing like the horror stories we're hearing from the Americans," the officer said.

"I heard a story of one German lady giving a U.S. family $1,000 because an American had helped her out during the war."

The U.S. Army has a different system of posting troops to West Germany. Servicemen whose grades are too low or length of service too short for the army to pay allowances for dependents — or even to transport them to Europe — sometimes bring their families over at their own expense.

Reports that German civilians have been giving food parcels to these families are disturbing U.S. military officials.

Canada transfers families intact and pays dependents allowances.

A year ago, when the Canadian dollar began to skid, it was worth about 2.50 deutschemarks. Today, it's worth approximately 1.80.

"What we used to get for the equivalent of $5 in a restaurant back then, now seems to cost about $8," the officer said.

"I've been thinking about buying a car, but I'm holding off. I just can't touch it."

A master corporal on the Lahr base, married with two children and a basic salary of $1,200 — about 2,300 deutschemarks — a month, estimated he is getting 200 deutschemarks a month less than he was getting at the first of this year.

Another master corporal, married with no children and living in a small apartment off the base, estimated the slipping exchange rate has cost him the equivalent of about half his month's rent.

For some, living in married quarters on the base — and, therefore not receiving a living-out allowance — it has been even tougher.

A married captain, seven years in that rank, receives, on top of his gross pay, a living-out adjustment, foreign service premium, and a clothing-upkeep allowance. His deductions include pension, unemployment insurance, income tax and group insurance.

Last December, his net pay was 3,976 deutschemarks, the next month it was 3,817 and by February, 3,764 — a drop of 212 deutschemarks.

For a married corporal, four years in rank, the net pay dropped to 2,549 deutschemarks from 2,686 — a loss of 137.

MAIR TO LOOK AT LICENSING

If Vancouver's Penthouse night club applies for the return of its cabaret licence, it will be processed quickly and at the highest level, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said today.

Joe Philliponi, one of the cabaret principals involved in a lengthy morals trial, said now that the Supreme Court of Canada has ruled in its favor, the club should get its licence back.

Mair said it is not usual for him to be involved in such applications.

"But frankly, this is a very controversial situation and I want the decision to be made once and for all and I want it to be made at the highest possible level."

Because the case involved a lot of publicity, Mair said the public as well as the Philliponis are entitled to have any licence application heard fully and quickly.

Philliponi, his brother, and three of their employees were convicted of conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution, and were fined and given jail terms.

But the B.C. Court of Appeal reversed the verdict and the attorney-general subsequently asked the Supreme Court to review the case.

The Supreme Court Tuesday decided not to hear the Crown's appeal.

McCarthy Won't Talk To Indians

Travel Minister Grace McCarthy said today she is disappointed with the decision by Friendly Cove Indians not to participate in the Captain Cook bicentenary.

All the other celebrations will go on as planned and as far as the government is concerned, she said, it has washed its hands of the Indians of Friendly Cove — the site of Cook's landing 200 years ago.

Mrs. McCarthy said the government will not make any further overtures to the native peoples in the area.

"I am disappointed, but as far as I'm concerned the matter is closed."

She said contrary to a persistent rumor, the Bicentennial Committee had no plans to re-enact Cook's landing at Friendly Cove.

"The only plans that we had were to mark the spot and hopefully give an opportunity for that particular area to benefit from the Captain Cook bicentennial celebrations."

The Mowachaht Indian band has declared the landing site off-limits to all visitors and rejected a government offer of a $200,000 longhouse in exchange for a welcome for tourists.

The Indians say they want nothing to do with what they claim is a distorted version of Cook's visit in 1778.

According to Nootka folk history it was the Mowachahts who discovered Cook afloat with his crew, lost in a fog and in poor health.

The Indian legend says they rescued Cook and his crew, nursed them to health and helped repair the boats.

1,000 To Rally For AA

A three-day Alcoholics Anonymous rally which opens here Friday is expected to attract about 1,000 people from the Pacific Northwest.

The event will be held in the Empress Hotel and starts Friday at noon with a lunch featuring speakers from New York and Vancouver. Local civic, business and labor leaders have been invited to attend.

An open public meeting will be held Friday night in the Crystal Ballroom.

All meetings are public, although the Friday night gathering is designed particularly for non-members of Alcoholic Anonymous.

Health Minister Bob McLelland and Mayor Mike Young will speak during a banquet Saturday.

A dance will follow and the rally will wind to a close during a breakfast meeting Sunday.

Cunard Cancels Ads After Cockroach Story

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

LONDON — The Cunard Line has cancelled $35,000 in advertising in the Sunday Times after the paper reported that U.S. health inspectors found cockroaches and other filth in galleys of the QE2 and sister Cunard ships.

The offending story and another in the paper's companion daily, the Times, are expected to cost the two nearly $100,000 in Cunard ads this year.

This classic example of advertising pressure on the press is peculiarly ironic. Cunard's chairman, Victor Matthews, is also the chairman of the Beaverbrook newspapers, publishers of the mass circulation Daily Express.

When Matthews' conglomerate bought the Beaverbrook papers last summer, he said:

"If we are going to ask good people to write, we must allow them to write what they want . . . they must have the freedom to write what they want to write."

Through his secretary, Matthews asked the Washington Post for 24 hours to frame a comment to reconcile the apparent inconsistency between his words and deeds. After 24 hours had passed, he made no comment.

John Mitchell, managing director of Cunard's passenger ship division, told the daily Times:

"If we are going to consider where best to spend our advertising money, we are not going to choose a place where a hostile environment has already been created by editorial policy. This is perfectly straight commercial sense."

Michael Mander, deputy chief executive and marketing director for both Times newspapers and others in the chain, has kept a stiff upper lip over the affair.

"None of our advertising staff is grumbling," he said. "They do know what our papers are about and we can't accept a threat to change legitimate editorial matter."

A Cunard ad scheduled to run in the Sunday Times on Jan. 22 was cancelled on two days' notice. Five others were also killed.

Last year, Cunard spent $58,000 in the Times group. Since the British economy has improved this year, an outlay of almost $100,000 could have been expected.

Cunard told the Times of its anger in a letter on Jan. 9 from Mitchell. "We were extremely disturbed over the Sunday Times article of Nov. 6," Mitchell wrote.

"Without making the point too obviously, your group has benefited from the marketing efforts and skills which have been put into selling this product."

The story that caused the storm was based on the periodic reports made by U.S. Public Health Service inspectors who check ships in U.S. ports. Their findings were obtained by the Sunday Times through the U.S. Freedom of Information Act. British health inspectors also examine ships, but there is no freedom of information law in Britain.

According to the report in the Sunday Times, the American inspectors reported that on a typical voyage in 1976, Cunard's new Countess liner was: mixing ice cubes for drinks with raw fish; carrying cubes in dirty drums and running up a coliform count of fecal organisms in the ice that was too high to measure.

The report said the newer Princess had been cited for irregularities on all 13 U.S. health inspections up to October 1977 and the QE2 reportedly had passed its latest test with flying colors, but a spring cruise reportedly had left 216 passengers with diarrhea.

What broke Cunard's bow, however, was a front page article in the daily Times on Jan. 6. It reported that QE2's Christmas Caribbean cruise had been disrupted by a breakdown in the distillers supplying water to the boilers.

But what really hurt was that the Sunday Times article about uncleanliness "was copied at irregular intervals in various American newspapers, and still goes on popping up all over America," where Cunard cruises draw many customers.

Sunday Times editor Harold Evans said he was "disturbed" by Mitchell's suggestion "that the advertising by Cunard should in some way give it a special position. I could not accept this."

Daily Times editor William Rees-Mogg told Mitchell: "I feel I must remind you that any attempt to introduce commercial considerations into complaints about the editorial conduct of a newspaper are bound to be resented and rightly resented, since they cut across the basic concept of the freedom of the press from commercial pressures."

Poison Tests Faked: Probe

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. government investigators say they have evidence that the nation's biggest commercial testing laboratory deliberately falsified data submitted to the government on potential carcinogens and that at least four major pesticide manufacturers were aware of the problem.

The laboratory, Industrial Bio-Test of Northbrook, Ill., has been under investigation by probers from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Food and Drug Administration since last fall. EPA and FDA have referred the results of their investigations to the justice department.

Knowledgeable federal regulatory officials said Wednesday that audits performed on the commercial lab by EPA and FDA have turned up far more problems than investigators had originally expected.

"At the beginning of this thing, we thought we were dealing with problems confined to just one three-year period," said a senior official involved in the probe. "Now we are in a position where we have to regard all of IBT's data as suspect."

The extent of the problem caused by the alleged data tampering by the lab was noted by the official, who said the World Health Organization, which sets international safety exposure standards for potentially harmful chemicals and pesticides, also relied heavily on data from IBT.

Among examples of what investigators said were apparently "real cases of fraud" were substitutions of healthy animals kept by IBT at the labs for animals that became ill during the tests. Investigators also found that IBT researchers failed in some cases to number test animals, making it virtually impossible to tell which were affected by the test substance.

Pension Snoops Hired by Gov't

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A high-powered firm of international private investigators has been hired by the federal government to track down Canadian war veterans or their dependents who may be getting benefits to which they're not entitled.

Wackenhut of Canada Ltd., a Toronto-based subsidiary of the Wackenhut Corp. of New York City, is to be paid $80,000 over the next two years to track down potential cheats in the United States and the United Kingdom.

The international search comes two years after a similar one in Canada uncovered widows who had not reported the deaths of their husbands or who had remarried and were ineligible to continue receiving benefits. That survey of persons, chosen at random by computer, cost about $30,000.

"That more than paid for itself," Allan Solomon, chairman of the Canadian Pension Commission, said after confirming that Wackenhut had been given the contract. "This one should also pay for itself in the first year."

He said that he doesn't expect deliberate fraud in most cases. The commission, which reports to Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald, is concerned mainly about veterans of the First World War, most of whom are now in their 80s.

They could have forgotten to report the death of a spouse simply because of their age or might think they still are entitled to full benefits.

In all, there are about

He said the commission, where possible, will try to recover overpayments and admits this sometimes can be difficult.

"We naturally don't like to do this sort of think if we can avoid it, but we have a duty to the taxpayer."

The Wackenhut survey will consist of three simple questions:

(a) Is the veteran alive?

(b) Does he or she live at the same address?

(c) Are family circumstances still the same?

Tight Scrutiny, Tougher Entry For Prospective Immigrants

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Federal immigration authorities will be cracking down, beginning next month, on people who enter Canada on visitors' permits and then decide they want to become landed immigrants.

This, and a revision of the points system on which potential immigrants are judged, are the highlights of new regulations that will go into effect next month when the revised Immigration Act becomes law.

Beginning April 10, any person who wants to study or work temporarily in Canada will have to have authorization and visas from a Canadian government office abroad before they are admitted to the country.

"At the moment," Immigration Minister Bud Cullen said Wednesday when the new regulations were unveiled, "would-be temporary workers or students from most countries can come to Canada without examination ... obtain entry as tourists and then apply to change their status once employment or a course of studies has been arranged."

He said this serves only to aggravate the already poor employment picture here.

The change in emphasis in the points system means that there will be less emphasis on purely academic qualifications and more on practical experience and training.

"It represents a slight shift," explained a senior immigration department official.

Another change is the potential five points an immigrant can pick up if he goes to a particular part of Canada where there is a particular need for his skill.

Theoretically, these five points could give him just enough for admission.

There is a small risk, however, that once granted landed immigrant status, that person could then decide he didn't like the area to which he had been sent and so would move elsewhere, perhaps to one of the major metropolitan centres where new immigrants have tended to congregate.

Originally, there was a proposal that if an immigrant was admitted on this basis, he would have to commit himself to remaining in the one area for a minimum number of years, but a parliamentary committee that was studying the proposed legislation felt this kind of condition couldn't be attached to immigrant status.

The immigration department official said that although an immigrant now would be totally free to move to another part of the country immediately, it was unlikely.

"From a purely practical point of view, he's likely to stay put and try to make a go of it. ... We think that in the larger number of cases, he's likely to stay."

Landed immigrants who leave Canada "for any period of time," according to the new regulations, will have to apply for re-entry; it will not be automatic.

Officials said this is designed to prevent someone coming to Canada for a couple of years to build up a nest egg and then going back home to live comfortably for a few years at lower expense before returning here again to repeat the cycle.

It also would prevent someone from gaining artificial resident status for the purpose of avoiding taxes at home.

When Cullen first introduced the legislation to Parliament in November, 1976, just two months after he took over the portfolio, he said that the new set of rules would protect Canada against "explosive" increases in immigrants with "their attendant social and economic strains."

It would seem, however, that the explosive trends of the late 1950s and early 1960s already have tapered off dramatically.

According to the immigration department itself, there were 115,000 new Canadians last year compared with 149,000 in 1976 and 181,000 in 1975.

The legislation, which finally was passed by Parliament last August, actually combines sections of the 1952 Immigration Act and the 1967 Immigration Appeal Board Act with a number of new provisions. It generally follows the recommendations of a joint Senate-House of Commons committee that held nearly 50 public hearings in 21 Canadian cities and heard from more than 1,800 individuals and organizations.

Carry On, Recyclers!

New Thrust Aims to Curb The 'Throwaway Culture'

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Recycling lives in Victoria.

Though the fervor that existed when it burst forth as a national virtue seven years ago may be lacking, the re-use of disposable household materials remains a useful conservation service that is about to undergo a renaissance in Greater Victoria.

Voluntary recycling has grown from intermittent neighborhood drives for newspapers and bottles — usually by Boy Scouts or school bands — to a regular service of the Capital Regional District and a band of collection depot volunteers.

When recycling had a high profile in the early 1970s, volume reached a peak. It has not grown demonstrably since, despite a population growth, because advertising and promotion was cut back while material-handling systems were appraised.

To have encouraged more recycling without better handling capacity would have strangled the system operating out of its Borden Street warehouse, says Don Sher, who is co-ordinator of the B. C. Recycling Council.

With the addition of a fork lift truck, a glass crusher and a baling machine, the depot will be able to handle a higher volume of the three basic salvage materials — glass, tin cans and newsprint — known in the trade as the trilogy.

These items, along with clean kraft paper and corrugated kraft board — grocery bags and cartons — are marketable and help the organization to finance its services, including advertising and public education.

Both advertising and educational services will resume shortly in the capital region and the provincial council has put together its first package aimed at Grades four to seven in the elementary schools.

Volunteer worker Mrs. Olive Alexander of Esquimalt says recycling will make its best strides when it becomes part of the school curriculum.

"We would really like some kind of educational program in the schools," she said.

"So many (children) are victims of the throwaway culture. We're all part of the problem so we must be part of the solution."

Mrs. Alexander's efforts are typical of the loyal determination of local volunteers who have worked for years to encourage their own neighborhoods to save recyclable refuse, and who actually go out collecting, co-ordinating and delivering bundles and cartons of segregated waste.

Esquimalt donates space once a month to the recyclers. A shed behind the municipal hall at Park and Carlisle is open the first Saturday of each month between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. to receive clean, flattened tins, bottles separated according to color, bundled newspapers and flattened cardboard cartons.

It was the Outreach group at Esquimalt United Church that started organized recycling about three years ago.

Twice a month volunteers collected materials from four or five homes and drive them in family cars to the Borden Street depot.

As the service caught on, it outgrew passenger cars and with stockpiling it became necessary to use trucks. Meanwhile the volunteers rose from a half dozen to about 20.

Something the same happened in Langford with members of Gordon United congregation. The service is now community-wide.

Esquimalt council supports recycling but like other municipalities is not yet ready to spend money on full-time staff and facilities for collection and assembly.

The volunteers provide information and instruction sheets as a guide to householders in preparing material for salvage.

Oak Bay has the region's second-largest depot next to headquarters, says Frank Raimondo, of the CRD engineering office.

Space is provided five days a week Monday through Friday to 4:30 p.m. at the municipal yard, where volunteers do the loading for transport to Borden Street.

He said with mechanization at the central depot, the next improvement might be to institute some regular pickup service for the community at large. An example might be collecting newspapers from all the apartment blocks in a given area at one time.

Newsprint is an item that has risen in value lately with increased demand by the insulation industry and recyclers see it as a means of improving their finances to help pay for services that are 80 per cent educational.

Sher sees it as a mixed blessing. It's both a source of cellulose fibre and an opportunity for marginal insulation-makers to make a quick profit by descending on a community and clearing it of virtually all its newsprint potential before moving on to another place.

"People might get a bad taste in their mouth from those who are here today, gone tomorrow," he said.

Recycling in Fairfield has returned in the form of a depot at Sir James Douglas schoolyard the third Saturday of the month to 3 p.m., and organizer Karen McIvor said volunteers are needed to help load the truck. (Call 386-3998).

The recycling warehouse on Borden, staffed full-time by three salvagers, is open Tuesday through Saturday.

Sher told a recent energy conference in Vancouver the savings to be gained in reusing materials and recovering energy from waste that is not recyclable could add $14.5 million a year to the provincial cash flow.

Municipal governments can take advantage of initiatives such as a B.C. matching grant for source-separated cyclage to foster a conservation attitude among citizens and employees and at the same time curb energy consumption, Sher said.

Trustees Bungled Closures —Vickers

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Greater Victoria trustees turned school closure into a hot political issue through their own incompetence, former deputy attorney-general Dave Vickers charged Wednesday night.

During a public hearing at Margaret Jenkins Elementary, Vickers accused the board of negligence in several areas, including its use of the "inadequate" Facilities Study '77 as reference material for its decision to close 150,000 square feet of school space this year.

VICKERS
. . . charges negligence

"We do not concede the closure of one square inch of school space in this district," said Vickers, speaking on behalf of the Margaret Jenkins Home and School Association.

Closure of Margaret Jenkins is impossible, Vickers said, because there isn't enough room in neighboring schools to accommodate all the students.

His statement was supported by district planner Evan Oakley, who said relocation would stretch the facilities at Monterey and Sir James Douglas schools to the bursting point and still fall 65 students short.

Vickers, now a Victoria lawyer with a child at the school, said the board was negligent in making its decision without public consultation and because it failed to consider all options.

Margaret Jenkins is the third of six schools to host a meeting on the possibility of closure or space reduction. The board has set a May 1 deadline for closure decisions.

So far, public hearings have drawn capacity turnouts strongly against closures and the Margaret Jenkins meeting was the biggest yet.

About 400 parents, students and teachers pinned on the school colors and crowded into the auditorium.

Ten briefs were presented to district administrators, including a 360-signature petition submitted by two Grade 5 students.

Briefs were read by the Gonzales Pre-School Co-operative, which rents a room in the school, the Fairfield Community Association and three teachers.

In his lengthy submission, Vickers lambasted trustees and strongly criticized the Facilities '77 study which he said contained outdated facts and inaccurate evidence.

Vickers, who has a child enrolled in a special education program at the school, made a personal appeal for continuation of classes for the hard of hearing and mentally handicapped.

Declining enrolment at Margaret Jenkins has provided the school space to develop the finest special classes in the province. They are a model for other classes of this kind across the country, Vickers said.

"It is a gross irresponsibility for the board to remove special education for the hard of hearing and the mentally handicapped," Vickers said.

Such a decision would make a mockery of the educational rights of special children and their right to academic and social integration with other children their own age, he said.

Enrolment at the school has dropped 49 per cent since 1970, from 584 to 297.

'Nothing Wrong' With Monterey Alarm System

A spokesman for the Greater Victoria school district said today the fire alarm system at Monterey Elementary School is working fine.

Bill Stavdal made the comment in reference to a letter in the Times Wednesday from Bob Cunningham, a custodian at Monterey, who said the system hasn't been fully operational for more than a year.

Stavdal said at the start of the school year there appeared to be a problem with a red trouble light on the control panel which was constantly on.

However, the company that installed the fire alarm system checked it out and found nothing wrong.

Since that time the school has had regular fire drills, the latest on Feb. 16, and all the fire bells have been working, he said.

School board chairman Susan Brice said today she was baffled by Cunningham's charge because she had reports from the schools and fire chiefs about four months ago which didn't indicate any problems.

However, she asked the district to check out the Monterey system.

Cunningham made the comment about the system after stating that as part of the school district's budget-cutting measures, the supply centre warehouse will be closed by June.

He said this will mean schools will have to stock six-month's worth of supplies in whatever storage facilities they have.

Cunningham said stocking the necessary paper, Gestetner fluids and other flammable materials in quantity in the schools "only adds to the possibility of fires occurring in the schools.

Brice said the schools have stocked a lot of flammable material before.

She said she couldn't see any problem as the schools have to conform with fire marshal's regulations.

"Obviously there are adequate restrictions laid down under the fire marshal's code that we will certainly be complying with," Brice said.

Child Starts Blaze

Fire started by a child playing with a cigarette lighter caused $8,000 damage to a Gorge Road apartment Wednesday afternoon.

Victoria firefighters found the caretaker's unit at Redwood Park Apartments, 155 Gorge East, ablaze at 3:52 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. E.G. Douglas told them their grandson had been playing with a lighter, which set fire to a bed and mattress and spread to the wall, carpet, clothing and furnishings.

Militant Tinge To Women's Day

International Women's Day in Victoria was a quiet celebration of the joys of sisterhood, with a slightly militant edge.

The festival of song, poetry, speeches and puppetry attracted curious shoppers passing through the Eaton's courtyard around noon Wednesday and they mingled with feminists using the event as a political platform.

Organizations in attendance included the Feminist Lesbian Action Group, members of a newly-formed union for bank employees called the Service Office and Retail Workers Union of Canada, and representatives from Rape Relief and Amnesty International.

One of the highlights of the celebration was a demonstration of Aikido, a Japanese martial art.

The idea is to appear not to resist, but rather to move in the same direction as the attacker, using his force to defeat him.

Aikido experts harmonize with the force and direct it where they want it to go, the audience was told as the form was gracefully demostrated by two women identified as Rowena and Cricket.

Pupppets were used to act out scenes of sexual stereotyping and discrimination encountered by working women today.

The audience was given a history of International Women's Day since its creation in 1916 by socialist garment workers in New York City, who were fighting for better working conditions and the right to vote.

Seventy years later, International Women's Day is a time of solidarity. This year's theme, Sisterhood Is Blooming, celebrates women's strength while recognizing still prevalent oppression in areas such as labor, day care and rape laws, the audience was told.

Workshop

The University of Victoria will hold its 13th annual neuropsychology workshop March 18-19 in the MacLaurin auditorium.

The sessions begin each day at 9.30 a.m.

Guest speakers will be Dr. Virginia Douglas, of McGill University and Dr. Robert Sprague, of the University of Illinois.

Douglas will speak on hyperactivity in children while Sprague will speak on psychoactive drugs and hyperactive schoolchildren.

No More Hearings On Western Plan

The Capital Region District board decided Wednesday against any more public hearings on the proposed Western Community Settlement plan.

The last and final meeting attracted only 13 people, two of whom spoke, and lasted 16 minutes.

Saanich Ald. John Mika, together with colleague Howard Sturrock and Victoria Ald. John Hayes failed to persuade other directors that another hearing should be held before the bylaw was read.

"I don't think that it is the responsibility of people at the meeting to wait until some other supposedly important function in the area is over so people can show up," said Colwood director Howard Drummond.

Drummond's comment came after Concerned Citizens' spokesman Frank Heinrich missed a chance to speak at the meeting because he attended a Social Credit wine and cheese party.

(The meeting was delayed 10 minutes to give people a chance to show up.)

"The people here today have had plenty of input and there is absolutely no change in their position since last June," Drummond said.

"It makes a mockery of public hearing if you re-hear," Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said. "You go to the expense of a public hearing with advertisements and all the other regulations, set a time, and if no one shows up you probably wait 10 minutes in case someone wanders in late.

"But I can't see the point of having a public hearing and then doing it again because someone slept in or was at a party and couldn't make it. That is ridiculous."

There have been nine public hearings as well as information meetings during the 2½ years the plan has been prepared and discussed, said Langford director Ed Lubick.

He said the group asking for a new hearing had been heard on numerous occasions.

"I take exception to the fact that a small group gets involved and can change intelligent people's minds so quickly after we have gone through all the legal steps," he said.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier said he felt the small attendance at the meeting indicated there were few objections to the plan in its final form. Earlier meetings on the plan had drawn between 200 and 300 people.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said he felt the majority of Western Community residents see the plan as both reasonable and necessary.

The bylaw was given three readings and will be sent to the provincial government for approval.

Sooke Raft Race All Set for April

Rafts for Captain Cook?

The worthy mariner probably wouldn't have been too impressed with the sailing qualities of the motley armada of craft which will take to the water April 1 and 2.

But the event, the fourth annual Sooke River Raft Race, is Sooke's own salute to Cook in this bicentennial year.

The organizers, Sooke Volunteer Firemen's Association, are expecting more than 40 raft crews to compete for more than $500 in prizes.

The race starts in Sooke Potholes Park and finishes two and a half miles downriver at the Sooke River Flats.

There's an interesting mix of fast water and smooth, and the usual prospect of spills, thrills and laughter.

Rafts must measure at least four feet by eight. Motors, oarlocks and fixed rudders are a no-no, but paddles and poles are permitted.

Entry fee is $10 and each raft crew must consist of at least two persons.

A new feature this year is a Raft Racers' Ball on the Saturday evening.

Rayonier 'Double Talk'

The Sierra Club of B.C. today accused Rayonier Canada Ltd. of using "double talk" in connection with a proposal for an integrated resource management study for the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Robert W. Nixon, Sierra's regional representative, said Rayonier at private meetings with the club has gone on record favoring a land-use study for the whole of the Queen Charlottes.

"But when we asked the company to request the government for such a study it replied that it was not in the position to do so," he said.

Rayonier is the largest logging company operating on public lands in the Queen Charlottes.

Island residents, as well as conservationists, are fighting to have southern Moresby Island set aside as a United Nation biosphere reserve because of its unique plant and animal life.

The company has a 21-year tree farm licence to log the land. It was granted in 1958 for a damage deposit of $6,000 by the Social Credit Government of W.A.C. Bennett.

"The reason an integrated land-use study is important is because no other resources were considered when the government leased most of the Queen Charlottes to logging companies," said Nixon.

He also said the company has refused to supply to citizen groups factual information on their logging operations and practices, except through the ministry of forestry.

However, he added, the ministry at one time did supply factual information to citizen groups, but has since had a change of heart and treats all such matters as secret.

"The position of Rayonier on this matter raises serious concerns," said Nixon. "Each forest company operating in B.C. should recognize the need for social responsibility."

"The impending crisis within the forest-derived econony of this province leaves no other rational choice," he said.

He said there is a compelling need to avoid playing a game of brinksmanship when it involves the future economic stability of B.C.

Nixon said it was a mistake for Rayonier, an American-based firm, to apply an artificial barrier to communication with the public in its Canadian operations.

FINAL

Are We Their Past?

HAMILTON (CP) — An official of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) says unidentified flying objects may be humans from the future visiting their history.

Charles Kubokawa said Wednesday he has seen pictures and it is foolish to discount them.

"We know we have stone age people in the Philippines," he said. "Why can't we have other beings of another highly-developed stage here too?

"Two-thirds of the world has not been explored fully."

A number of UFOs were reported in southern Ontario on Monday night.

Kubokawa, in Hamilton to speak at McMaster University, said many people criticize the NASA space program as unproductive. They would rather have social welfare spending, he said.

"But everyone benefits from the spin-offs," he said. "Digital watches, vest-pocket computers, microwave ovens, a lot of bio-medical things were developed by the space program," he said.

Research and development programs are important to the economic future of all developing countries, including Canada, and they must spend money on it, he said.

Kubokawa is chief of NASA's Ames research centre technology utilization office at Moffett Field, Calif.

Zambia Says Border 'Tense'

Times News Services

LUSAKA — Zambian Foreign Minister Siteke Mwale said Wednesday exchanges of fire are continuing across the Zambesi River border with Rhodesia following a major incursion, and he described the situation as tense.

Mwale's comments are the first official indication of continued hostilities following one of Rhodesia's biggest-ever raids into Zambia two days ago.

Rhodesia said Tuesday its white-led troops had withdrawn. But Mwale told a news conference that while the Rhodesians have been repelled, "the situation is not stagnant. It is tense. There are exchanges of fire across the border. Fighting is still going on."

Mwale was speaking before leaving for New York where Zambia is to complain to the United Nations Security Council about the raid, in which the Rhodesians claim to have killed at least 38 black nationalist guerrillas.

He warned of possible superpower involvement in the six-year old Rhodesia war, and said Western powers should take steps to end the fighting now before it became internationalized.

Zambia provides bases for guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU) which has two big bases in or near Luangwa district, nationalist sources say.

In Washington meanwhile, U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen agreed Wednesday that Rhodesia's plan for black majority rule must be greatly improved to avert black-black civil war across southern Africa.

The ultimate danger of greater Soviet-Cuban military involvement in Africa is dangling over the American-British-African discussions, in Washington and at the United Nations.

American and British strategy is to straddle the present dispute, in an attempt to encourage a compromise between the African nationalists inside Rhodesia who last week signed a peace plan with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, and the Africans outside Rhodesia who denounce the plan as "a sellout" to the whites.

Asked if the Salisbury plan is constructive enough to warrant removing the economic sanctions which the United Nations voted against Rhodesia after Smith's government unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 196[illegible]. Vance replied, "No."

If there is no road left open to the Patriotic Front but escalating the guerrilla war against Rhodesia, U.S. planners say, the front is bound to turn — as it has warned — to the Soviet Union and Cuba for reinforcing troops and supplies.

With up to 20,000 Cuban troops now in Angola, and 11,000 in Ethiopia along with Soviet advisers and military supplies, there will be a strong Soviet-Cuban inclination to make a new commitment in southern Africa.

Snow Slide Hits Skier

WHISTLER (CP) — Rick Mandahl, 25, of Garibaldi Lifts Ltd.'s ski patrol, was uninjured Wednesday after being buried for seven minutes under 1.2 metres of snow in a soft slab avalanche on Whistler Mountain, about 100 kilometres north of Vancouver.

Al Turner, manager of the company's ski operation, said Mandahl could credit good training and advanced equipment for his lucky escape.

Turner said Mandahl was unconscious when the other five patrol members dug him out of the snow around noon Wednesday. He revived soon after and was checked by a company doctor. No hospital treatment was required.

Turner said the patrol members, all of whom wore avalanche detectors, dug Mandahl out after their detectors picked up the signal from the buried transmitter worn by the victim.

The patrollers were engaged in normal avalanche work on the Surprise run at about the 1,800-metre level of Whistler Mountain. About 14 centimetres of new snow had fallen overnight.

Minister Ducks Nurses' Protest

Health Minister Bob McClelland said today he will not get involved in the dismissal of a Gorge Road Hospital nursing director Dorothy Youlden.

A letter protesting her firing signed by 58 nurses at the hospital has been sent to McClelland, but the minister said staffing matters are out of his jurisdiction.

Hirings and dismissals are the responsibility of the administration of each individual hospital, not the minister of health's.

For him to get involved, "it would have to be a pretty unusual case," he said.

McLelland Pushed Socred To Resign, Members Agree

LANGLEY (CP) — Two executive members of the Social Credit constituency association of Langley came forward Wednesday to support their ex-president, Al Gates, who claims he was pressured by Health Minister Bob McClelland into resigning last week.

George Dyck, leader of the associations's Aldergrove group, said McClelland proposed the resignation because Gates' name had appeared in local newspapers in connection with a police roundup of an alleged heroin smuggling ring.

McClelland, who represents Langley riding, denied earlier this week he had demanded — or even suggested — that Gates quit his post over the drug incident.

Questioned today about the Socred officials' claim he had acted to get Gates out, McClelland snapped: "I have no further comment to make on the matter.

"The story is over as far as I am concerned. Mr. Gates submitted his resignation and we accepted it."

Dyck said he now is convinced that Gates should not have resigned since he was named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the heroin case only because one suspect had used the telephone at Gates' TV and stereo shop in Abbotsford.

He said he attended the meeting last week at which Gates finally resigned, under protest, but that he wasn't too sure just how the request for the resignation was expressed.

"McClelland made the speech, though," Dyck said, "and it was he who said Gates should resign for the good of the party. I don't believe that now, because I believe Gates did nothing wrong. How could he know what a customer's telephone calls might be about?

"I'm not out to condemn anyone. I just hope that when all the facts are known, the whole thing can be ironed out. Al's a fine fellow and he shouldn't feel he's being forced out of the party."

Another association member, asking that her name be withheld, said Gates' account of what happened to him is correct.

"McClelland asked him to quit, and Al said he wouldn't quit unless the members at the meeting made a motion to dismiss him and voted him out," she said. "The minister talked the members out of allowing the motion."

Federal Workers Protest New Ottawa Crackdown

eliminate the risk of a public service strike during an election campaign. It would give the cabinet power to defer a lawful strike considered contrary to the public interest until 21 days after the Commons resumed sitting following the election.

The action could be taken only after dissolution of Parliament, not prorogation or adjournment.

Although the amendments would exclude some employees from collective bargaining, it would also extend the right to others who had previously been excluded.

Managerial exclusions from collective bargaining would now be determined by the classification of their positions in a new and expanded managerial occupational category.

Any public servant making $33,500 a year or more would automatically be exempted.

Treasury Board said the measure is necessary because in many cases the salaries of excluded managers are lower than those of their subordinates. This would remove an estimated 6,500 more public servants from union membership.

All Treasury Board employees will be excluded from collective bargaining, an increase of 299 over the 571 who are already excluded.

The new legislation would open the door for union membership to as many as 10,000 casual or temporary employees because they would become eligible after only 60 days on the job.

The present requirement provides that a temporary worker must be employed by the public service for a continuous period of six months before becoming a union member.

The shorter waiting period, officials believe, may discourage the practice of hiring casual workers because early union membership would make it more difficult to dismiss them.

As many as 3,500 public servants previously excluded from collective bargaining on grounds of confidentiality would become members of bargaining units and subject to collective bargaining. This would apply to persons who work on a confidential basis for employees who represent the government at the first stage of the grievance procedure when more than one stage is involved.

The change would reduce the number of excluded "confidential" employees from 11,500 to 8,000.

The short-term layoff provision would come into force where there was no work to be done, for a temporary period, because of a strike by another group. This, the PSAC argued, would "further erode" job security in the public service.

The lockout provision contained in the amendments would parallel the right to strike and would be subject to conditions and constraints similar to those that apply to strikes.

"If employees have the right to withhold their services, we believe the counterbalance is for us to have the right to lock them out," Andras observed at a news conference following the tabling.

Stewart argued there is "no need for the right to lockout in the federal public service because the employer, through the process of designated employees, can and does ensure that functions continue."

He suggested that if there is to be a lockout right, the process of designating employees to continue working during a strike should be withdrawn.

The proposed changes to the Public Service Staff Relations Act include official recognition of the Pay Research Bureau which has been in existence since 1957. It would provide data in support of total compensation comparability and collaborate with the provinces.

Empty Suite Breakins Soaring

Daytime robberies of unoccupied apartments are increasing, Victoria and Oak Bay police warned today.

Tenants are urged to report any unusual activities or strangers who gain entrance to apartment blocks.

City police say a number of burglaries have been attributed to juveniles and dealt with in juvenile court, but the practice is not confined to youngsters.

Thieves look for cash, jewellery, silver, cameras or other property which can be easily concealed or sold, a police spokesman said.

They sometimes gain access to controlled entrance buildings by pretending to have a delivery for a tenant, he said, or wait until a tenant is about to use his front door key before rushing up with a key in his hand while the real tenant politely holds the door for him.

Once inside, an intruder has a choice of apartments to enter after ascertaining which are unoccupied. If a strip of celluloid won't unlock a door, a short pinch bar applied to the door jamb will pop open most latches.

COSSITT—WARRANT READY

"If I'm to be arrested, I would rather have the Speaker of the House (James Jerome) be required to sign the warrant than to allow Trudeau to do it through the Mounties with an ordinary warrant."

He claimed telephone lines connected with his Commons office had "a beep on our phone in the late afternoon—it sounds like some kind of an official-type taping under way.

"It makes you wonder what this country is coming to under Trudeau when the government can use the national police force to practically besiege an Opposition MP in his parliamentary office."

In a lighter vein, Cossitt got some advice from a fortune cookie Wednesday.

"Hold your tongue, it's getting away from you," read the message inside the cookie.

TWO-PRONGED BID TO BOLSTER DOLLAR

In Europe, Canadian forces reported feeling the pinch as their pay packets shrank in relation to local currencies. See story, page 38.

Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, said in a statement that the bank rate increase — the first change since May 9 — was intended to moderate downward pressures on the dollar.

But the rate increase, effective today, which applies to the Bank of Canada's infrequent loans to chartered banks, likely means higher interest charges for consumers.

The Royal Bank, the Bank of Montreal, the Toronto Dominion Bank and the Mercantile Bank of Canada announced today they will raise their prime interest lending rates to 8¾ per cent from 8¼ per cent in the next few days.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien also announced filing of a statement with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission as a prelude to an offering of $750 million of Government of Canada bonds in the U.S.

The filing is a necessary step before sales of the bonds are permitted in the U.S. The bond issue will be the first in the U.S. in 10 years.

Meanwhile, the Canadian and U.S. economies and dollars are prime items on the agenda today in talks here between President Carter's two top economic advisers and Finance Minister Jean Chretien.

Michael Blumenthal, U.S. secretary of the treasury, and Charles Schultze, head of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, are meeting Canadian officials in what are billed as informal one-day talks.

They will discuss "what is right and what is wrong" with the economies of the two countries, one department spokesman says.

Fueled by soaring food costs, U.S. wholesale prices jumped 1.1 percent in February for their biggest monthly gain in more than three years, the U.S. Labor Department reports. On an annual basis, that is a 13.2 percent increase — double the current basic inflation rate.

Although there is a chance higher Canadian interest rates could dampen consumer spending and ultimately result in lost jobs, Bouey said the change should be helpful to the longer-term prospects for the economy.

The increase "should not have a major effect on near-term prospects for the growth of output and employment," he said.

In announcing the change, Bouey noted that since 1976 there was a substantial narrowing of the gap in short-term interest rates between Canada and the U.S. Rates in Canada have been higher.

The gap of four per cent in the autumn of 1976 had grown to about 0.5 per cent, making Canada a less attractive investment for U.S. investors.

"This change is one of the factors that has contributed to the substantial decline over the period in the foreign exchange value of the dollar," Bouey said.

Recently, U.S. authorities have increased their bank rate in an effort to keep American money at home.

But by widening the interest-rate gap, Canadian officials hope to attract foreign investment. An inflow of foreign capital would help support the dollar by tending to increase demand for Canadian currency.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market continued to decline moderately in active mid-afternoon trading despite a fractional gain at New York.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 2.38 million shares, up from 2.18 million at the same time Wednesday.

Declines led advances 180 to 147 with 221 issues unchanged.

Among industrials, Bell Canada dropped 1 to $53¾, Atco Industries A ⅝ to $11½, Husky Oil ⅝ to $29⅝, Imasco A ⅝ to $30½ and Alcan ⅝ to $25⅛.

Interpool Ltd. climbed 1 to $23½, Canron ¾ to $22¾, Abitibi Paper ¼ to $11⅞, Revenue Properties five cents to 83 cents and Consolidated Pipe Lines ½ to $6½.

Sigma Mines Quebec dropped 1½ to $33½, Giant Yellowknife ⅜ to $14¼ and Denison Mines ¼ to $60. Brenda Mines gained 1 to $9⅝ and Falconbridge Copper 15 cents to $4.05.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market worked its way ahead again, continuing its recent technical upswing despite some negative inflation news.

Analysts have attributed the market's recent strength to technical forces after the sharp decline of January and February, when the Dow fell 89 points.

"The market apparently found support at around the 740 level of the Dow," said Newton Zinder at E.F. Hutton and Co.

The news background, meanwhile, remained largely negative. The government reported today that prices received by manufacturers for finished goods climbed at a 13.2 per cent annual rate in February.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. The Price Company gained ⅛ at $11⅞, Inco A ⅛ at $15⅞, Seagram ⅛ at $25¼ and Bank of Nova Scotia ⅛ at $20. Zeller's lost ⅛ at $7¼, Massey-Ferguson ⅛ at $9¾, Consumers Gas ⅛ at $16¾ and Husky Oil ⅛ at $29¾. Among speculative issues, Quebec Explorers Corp. advanced one cent to 30 cents on a volume of 11,000 shares traded.

London

LONDON (CP) — News of lower-than-expected British government borrowing sent the London stock market sharply higher today near the close of light trading. The Financial Times index was up 6.4 to 453.1 an hour before the close.
